CHICAGO HOPES TO LAND 1932'S 2 CONVENTIONS

Bid for Democratic Session Made.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—Chicago is the first bidder in the ring for the Democratic national convention of 1932.

This was disclosed today when it became known that Michael Igoe, Democratic national committeeman for Illinois, did a lot of proselyting in behalf of Chicago at the meeting of the Democratic national committee yesterday. He received considerable encouragement, he said today, from eastern as well as western members who regard Chicago as the logical meeting place of the body that will choose the Democratic candidate for President.

It also transpired that Chicago is out to land the Republican as well as the Democratic national convention. It is understood that a committee of Chicago business men is to be created to submit bids to the national committees of both parties when they meet next winter to fix the time and place of their conventions.

Victory Appears Sure.

"The impression I get from talks with numerous members of the Democratic national committee yesterday and today," said Mr. Igoe tonight, "is that there should be comparatively little difficulty in obtaining the selection of Chicago for the Democratic national convention.

"Almost every one with whom I talked admitted that Chicago is the ideal convention city because of its central location, its hotel capacity, its transportation facilities, its numerous attractions in the way of entertainment and diversion, and, last but not least, its summer resort climate.

"For a time Chicago labored under the disadvantage of having no auditorium sufficiently large to accommodate the modern national convention and spectators. Now it is different. Being able to assure members of the committee that we have the Stadium with a capacity exceeding that of Madison Square Garden in New York, I found that the last bar to serious consideration of Chicago as the convention city had been removed. I am confident that we shall be able to land the prize.

Some Drys May Object.

"The only objection to Chicago as the scene of the nomination of the Democratic ticket and the adoption of the party platform appeared to have emanated from some of the dry southern members of the committee. The objection raised in that quarter is due professedly to the fear that the environment of a convention in wet Chicago would be inimical to the nomination of any but a wet candidate. Inasmuch, however, as Al Smith, than whom there could be no wetter candidate, was nominated at a convention held in the dry south, the environment objection is of questionable validity."

Mr. Igoe indorsed in principle Democratic National Chairman John J. Raskob's home rule plan for solution of the prohibition problem.

Praises Raskob Plan.

"Mr. Raskob," he said, "presented a proposition which I am confident will appeal strongly to the people of Illinois. It is becoming clear that the effort to force total abstinence upon the entire nation by statute was a grievous mistake. It is becoming clear that if this question is to be settled justly and for all time it must be under some arrangement which will allow states so desiring to retain prohibition and states so desiring to restore the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor.

"Mr. Raskob has made a proposal that would attain this end. It may be that some better plan to attain this end will be brought forward, but certain it is that this is the end that must be attained if we are to have peace again in this distracted land. Nothing was made plainer in the national committee yesterday than that the party by an overwhelming majority is in favor of a modification of national prohibition. There is no doubt in my mind now that the party will adopt a platform next year providing modification, if not repeal."

Lewis May Enter Primary.

The Illinois committeeman declined to discuss candidacies for the nomination, beyond saying that Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois will be entered in the presidential primaries of that and a number of other states.

Of all the developments of the committee meeting none was of greater interest to the Democratic politicians

TELLS OF LOVE FOR DEAD GIRL; PLANNED TO WED

Gives His Version of Fatal Party.

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.

Valparaiso, Ind., March 6.—[Special.]—Virgil Kirkland took the witness stand in his own behalf in Porter County court today and pictured himself to a jury of farmers as the tender lover of Arlene Draves, the Gary girl for whose rape and murder he is on trial.

It was a romance of the fumbling affection of youth that he unfolded. Arlene, as he pictured her, was the shy high school freshman, adoring him for his football prowess, and he was the modest hero of the school, giving her respectful worship until he finally won her love and was about to make her his bride only two weeks before what he invariably referred to as "the tragedy."

From the emphasis of his answers to his lawyers' questions he implied that the state's charge that he ravished Arlene and incited four others to do the same as incomprehensible.

Admits They Were Intimate.

He admitted intimacy with the girl at the party last Nov. 29, but insisted that their relations were voluntary. He denied that he had slugged her when she resisted his advances, as the state contends. He insisted that she fell out of a chair on the porch that night and struck her head violently on the floor.

When Arlene fell he was too stunned to pick her up, he said. When her body began to grow cold in his arms three hours later as they rode around Gary with three other boys, jointly accused with him of the murder, he was frightened.

Of the bruises on her body and the internal injuries, suffered, the state contends, by ravishment, he knew nothing. Kirkland knew only that the girl was dead, he said, and he wept as he said it.

Sobs Over Their First Kiss.

The first tears came as Kirkland, led up to the point by the questions of Attorney Barratt O'Hara, described Arlene's first kiss. Injured in a crucial football game, he was abed in a hospital when she came in with a friend and timidly pressed her lips to his brow. He wept again when the lawyer worked up to a climax and asked: "Virgil, did you love her?"

"O, I did," he said, and sobbed.

"Brace up, boy, brace up," O'Hara counseled.

And Virgil did brace up. During recess, only twenty minutes after his tearful outburst, he was in an anteroom with Sheriff Burney Maxwell, laughing, joking, and holding up his steady hand to demonstrate his control of his nerves.

Questions Prosecutor.

Under two and a half hours of direct examination Kirkland was a docile and composed witness. Under the cross-examination of Prosecutor John Underwood he remained composed, but was far from docile.

Indeed, in fencing with the prosecutor, he succeeded at times in reversing their positions and had Underwood answering the questions. The prosecutor failed to shake any material point in his story.

At the intermission following Kirkland's emotional display, the prosecutor and Attorney O'Hara met in the corridor.

"For heaven's sake, have a heart for the boy," Mr. O'Hara urged.

"Let him shed his own tears," retorted the fiery prosecutor. "There has been weeping for the living today, but I haven't heard any for the dead."

Field Day for the Curious.

The old courtroom was packed to the doors. Hundreds were jammed in the courthouse rotunda outside, pressing against the glass panels to catch a word or a look. Judge Grant Crumpacker had relaxed his rule limiting the spectators to the seating capacity of the courtroom and the thrill seekers, flappers, matrons, spinsters and men, were ranged in rows even around the judicial bench.

The defendant, clad in a spruce gray suit with a white handkerchief peeping from his breast pocket, mounted the stand slowly. His crisp hair was neatly parted down the center and his rather pugnacious features were somber.

A QUESTION OF LIFE OR DEATH

AURORA ELECTION APRIL 7 WILL BE A FREE FOR ALL

The voters of Aurora learned last night that when they go to the polls on April 7 to elect seven of the supervisors of Kane county and also one school trustee, there will not be the name of a single candidate on their ballots. The voters will have to write their own tickets.

This unusual situation arises from an act of the legislature which recently changed the limit for filing candidacies from 15 days before elections to 35 days. All the aspirants to office, including the incumbents, were waiting until April 22 to file. All overlooked the change in the law.

Their oversight was revealed last night by Town Clerk Michael Weiler, who announced that the limit for filing had expired at midnight on March 3. "The ballots will be blanks," said Weiler. "The voters can name whomever they desire by writing in the names of candidates."

The supervisors who intended to file for reëlection are John F. Hoislag, A. F. Lohmann, Peter Freeman, Nicholas Schwartz, Herbert Osborne, W. R. Dunkle, and Thomas Walsh. Fred Staudt is the school trustee.

JAPAN EMPRESS GIVES BIRTH TO A 4TH DAUGHTER

TOKIO, March 7 [Saturday].—(AP)—A child was born to the emperor and empress of Japan in the imperial palace today, but the sovereign is still without a direct heir to succeed him on the throne of the "line unbroken for ages eternal."

The imperial infant is a daughter, the fourth born to their majesties, and although the imperial family and nation are thankful for the safety of the little princess and her mother, the rejoicing is tempered by scarcely veiled disappointment that the new arrival cannot be welcomed as the crown prince.

Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako have no sons, and only male descendants of the sun goddess may occupy the throne. Prince Chichibu, the emperor's next younger brother, continues to be the heir presumptive.

Philip Snowden, British Statesman, Seriously Ill

LONDON, March 7.—(AP)—Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, who has been ill several days with influenza, was understood today to be in a more serious condition than was at first supposed. His advisers have called in Sir John Thomson-Walker, a Harley street surgeon. An official bulletin will be issued this afternoon as soon as Sir John has seen Mr. Snowden.

The Wanderer Struggles Back to His Heritage

Edward Ward, 70 years old, one of the members of a Rhode Island family which has long been distinguished for its contributions to cultivation and taste, was standing in the living room of a residence at 1282 Asbury avenue, Hubbard Woods, yesterday, when he detected the unpleasant sensation of vertigo overcoming him.

Mr. Ward, no doubt supposing that the attack was transient as it often had been before, sank into a Chippendale chair for the moment.

His Cherished Heritage.

Mr. Ward had often said to Harold K. Weld, in whose living room he now sat, that these evidences of good breeding which he perceived all about him in the residences of Hubbard Woods were reminiscent of family life in Rhode Island, where he had lived as a boy, and also that his subconscious predisposition for artistic surroundings and intelligent human association was not alone the result of his youthful observation but of a heritage which he cherished.

In the old Rhode Island home he had found pleasure in an exquisite carving or a dainty miniature or a fine old chest of drawers. But more especially he relished his association with mannerly folk whose minds dwelt with ease upon subjects of distinction and quality.

The Sea Calls Its Own.

The zest for seafaring and venturing into curious ports of the world is no mean appetite in your Rhode Island boy. Young Ward went aboard ship and faded into that twilight lure of sails and gear and spindrift and chanteys. Sometimes as he sat on the edge of a skylight and gazed at an aluminum moon sliding through scudding clouds he would renew a vow to lay a course for the old home in Rhode Island.

The years passed with increasing rapidity as they are wont to do when half of them are here and gone, and yet Mr. Ward had not found his course laid for Rhode Island. Sometimes he would stay ashore and go from town to town. It was pleasant to see and hear new things, a waft of music from a woodland picnic or a blaze of light in a city.

Thrills Fade but Not Desire.

Then Mr. Ward found he was growing old. And always plucking at his conscience was this thirst for home. But it seemed too late. Besides, he was no longer the youth who had left home in thrill of venturesome expectation. He had traveled too far. His clothing hung about him bagged and raveled. His chin was always lost in a maze of unkempt beard. Sometimes his coat was buttonless and often his shoes were pitifully insufficient.

But then he determined that if he couldn't go home to the intelligence and taste and breeding he had once known he would at least try to live in its neighborhood. He was shambling in West Madison street, where ceaselessly there is by day and by night the soft shuffling of weary feet of men from nowhere, when he resolved that he would, in this evening of his life, regale his soul in the company of accomplished people.

A Goal Attained at Last.

He had said to Mr. Weld: "I'll work for almost nothing. I want to be near people such as I knew in my boyhood. I want to hear intelligent voices and see artistic things. I can't be one of them, but I should like so much to be near them."

So Mr. Ward became a window washer in the homes of Hubbard Woods. And it was this he was doing yesterday when the attack of vertigo overcame him as he stood in the living room of the Weld residence.

So he sank into a chair. And it was there he sat when a member of the household saw him. He seemed to be deep in reflection and as if he had been drawn close to the home of his boyhood. He was still in this reflective pose when Dr. J. M. Garner, who had been summoned, watched him a moment and said:

"He is dead."

Quarrel Over Gold Exposes Sale of Girls

Los Angeles, Cal., March 6.—[Special.]—Disclosures of the manner in which Los Angeles High school girls were recruited to visit wealthy men in hotels and spend week-ends for immoral purposes began to accumulate as three persons were arraigned before Judge William S. Baird today.

John P. Mills, wealthy broker and lumberman, who is asserted to have been visited at his hotel rooms by Clarice Tauber, 16, was arraigned first on statutory charges. He was released on $5,000 bail pending trial on March 31.

William H. Jobelmann, 38, former theater press agent, and Olive Day, formerly known as Dorothy Clark and Olive Day Clark, motion picture actress, were next arraigned. They are accused of operating the "love market" in Hollywood, which, expensively done in bizarre modernistic decorations, and equipped with disappearing doors, swanky bedrooms and dim, hazy lights, offered a visiting place for men and girls, and supplied amazing card indexes with biographical data on scores of girls and dozens of wealthy male patrons.

Unable to Furnish Bail.

Jobelmann and Miss Day, who gave her age as 24, were arraigned on a statutory charge, and, like Mills, were remanded for hearing on March 31. They were unable to provide bail. The woman collapsed into the arms of Police Matron Marjorie Fairchild.

Jobelmann and Miss Day, who posed as his wife, might have run their "love market" for a long time had it not been for a quarrel and fist fight they had over division of money the girls turned in after keeping dates with wealthy men. Following the fight, Miss Day gave the card index of girls and men patrons to a friend for safe-keeping. This friend in looking over the list saw the name of his 13-year-old sister-in-law among hundreds of others registered at the "love market" and complained to the district attorney.

Names of several school girls were injected into the case, which is being pressed by District Attorney Buron Fitts following revelations made to the authorities early this week by the scandalized mother of a school girl.

Hold Two Girls as Witnesses.

Besides Clarice Tauber, who is being detained in technical custody, as a witness, the investigators, under Blayney Mathews and Juvenile Officer Florence Woodhead, placed Alice Blake, 16, under technical custody.

They also announced a quest for a girl known as Patsy Fox. Miss Fox is asserted to have introduced Mills, the wealthy broker, to Mrs. Fern Setril, 22 year old divorcee, who last week filed suit for $601,000 against David Wark Griffith on accusations of rape. The suit has been withdrawn.

The attractive Mrs. Setril's name entered the schoolgirl investigation together with that of her former roommate, Marguerite Shearer, today, when investigators stated that both were to be summoned for questioning. There is no charge lodged against either.

Forty Men Are Involved.

This evening Helen Livingston, 19, and Helen Scott, 16, were taken to Investigator Mathew's office for questioning. Mathews said that so far names of forty-one men have been taken for investigation.

Investigator Mathews asserted that four other girls, all under 17, are implicated in the revelations.

Three of the girls are asserted to have confessed, naming men and sums of money, to the district attorney's staff. As a result of their confessions, a half dozen men, some said to be well known in Hollywood film circles and Los Angeles business af-

DODGING INCOME TAX IS CHARGED TO CITY OFFICIAL

Accused of Failing to Pay $113,000.

Christian P. Paschen, city building commissioner in Mayor Thompson's cabinet, was arrested in the street by a deputy United States marshal late yesterday 30 minutes after he had been indicted by the federal grand jury on charges of attempting to evade $113,497 in income taxes.

Paschen was getting into his automobile in front of the Foreman National Bank building when Deputy Marshal Joseph Spizzirri arrested him on a bench warrant issued by Federal Judge Woodward.

"You can't arrest me," Paschen protested. "My bond is ready at the federal building and I'll go over and surrender."

"You're going with me," said Spizzirri. "I have a warrant for your arrest, and it doesn't make any difference who you are; I must perform my duty."

Freed on $25,000 Bond.

Paschen escaped the possibility of spending the night in jail by a few minutes. It was shortly after 5 o'clock when he reached the federal building, but Judge Woodward had not left. A $25,000 surety bond for his release, signed by the National Union Surety company of Philadelphia, was approved by Judge Woodward, and then Paschen was taken to the marshal's office to have his finger prints taken.

Deputy Marshal James Nordsick, in charge of the Bertillon department, was about to proceed with the finger printing, but Paschen's attorney, James A. O'Callaghan, who had appeared in the building simultaneously with the defendant, objected. He pointed out that under the law a man cannot be finger printed without his permission until he has been convicted, and the proceeding was waived.

Indicted on Four Counts.

Paschen was named in four counts, charging willful attempts to defeat and evade the payment of income taxes, the maximum penalty on any one count, upon conviction, being five years in the penitentiary and a fine of $10,000. Two of the counts are based on the alleged evasion of taxes for the year 1927, and the other two for 1928.

The true bill charges that Paschen tried to evade payment of $43,001.43 on his income taxes for 1927, based on his alleged income of $234,240.99; and that he attempted to defeat payment of $70,495.60 in taxes for 1928, when his income allegedly was $333,-685.54.

His Tax Return for 1927.

It is alleged that his return for the year 1927 claimed a gross and net income of $5,108.19, derived as follows:

Income from business or profession [Loss]	$15,150.48
Rents and royalties	1,926.00
Dividends on stock	18,333.65

This return, it is charged, showed no tax due, Paschen being a married man with two dependents.

For the year 1928, according to the indictment, Paschen filed a return showing a gross income of $30,267.44, derived as follows:

Income from business or profession	$ 962.63
Interest on bank deposits, notes, bonds, etc.	2,326.56
Interest on tax free covenant bonds	3,167.33
Rents and royalties	5,360.00
Dividends on stocks	18,468.51

This return, after making deductions, showed a net income of $28,614.21, with a tax due of $818, the true bill alleged.

Charges $234,240 Gross Income.

The indictment itemizes Paschen's alleged gross income of $234,240.99 for 1927 as follows:

Income from business or profession	$138,410.29
Interest on bank deposits, notes, bonds, etc.	11,361.50
Rents and royalties	4,427.05
Profits from sale of real estate, stocks, bonds, etc.	40,992.86
Dividends on stocks	19,129.30

For the year 1928, Paschen's alleged gross income of $333,685.54 is itemized as follows:

Income from business or profession	$304,171.17
Interest on bank deposits, notes, bonds, etc.	2,930.73
Interest on tax free covenant bonds	3,167.33
Rents and royalties	4,929.70
Dividends on stocks	18,486.51

In Contracting Business.

Besides his activities as city building commissioner, Paschen is head of Chris Paschen & Co., luck painters, and a member of the firm of Paschen Bros., Inc., contractors.

The indictment of Paschen culminated an investigation that began more than a year ago in United States Attorney Johnson's income tax assault on hoodlums and grafting politicians, which has resulted in the conviction of County Assessor Gene Oliver, State Representative Lawrence C. O'Brien, and such notorious gangsters as Ralph Capone, Jack Guzik, Frank Nitti, Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, the latter three having pleaded guilty.

The investigation was carried on by agents of the special intelligence unit, internal revenue bureau, headed by A. P. Madden, and by revenue men under C. W. Herrick, agent in charge, whose work was praised by the district attorney. Assistant United States Attorneys Dwight H. Green and Samuel G. Clawson presented the case to the grand jury.

Hearings in Washington.

Paschen made frequent trips to Washington, where hearings on the investigation of his case were held before the general counsel of the revenue bureau, according to reports. A final hearing was given to Paschen's attorneys on Feb. 20 by District Attorney Johnson and his assistants.

Charges that bribes were solicited and paid in the office of Building Commissioner Paschen were made in a civil suit last April. Jules K. Massee, a draftsman, testified that $50,000 had been paid for the approval of building plans.

Paschen has been under fire in various other official proceedings, chief of which was the Cuneo tower case. The building commissioner refused to revoke a permit for the proposed 60 story tower when he was ordered to do so by a mandate of the city council. An ordinance was passed commanding him to revoke the permit, but Paschen still balked. He refused to revoke the permit even after the corporation counsel had ruled that it was his duty to do so, and the permit was not revoked until the Supreme court declared invalid the amendment to the city ordinance under which it had been granted.

Forms Republican Club.

In 1927 Paschen sent letters to virtually all Chicago builders notifying them that they had become members of the William Hale Thompson Republican club. The builders later were notified that the initiation fee was $100. They did not complain, fearing, some of them said, that their business would be ruined.

Paschen's indictment brings District Attorney Johnson's determination to expose "a cross section of official gangsterism" a step nearer to realization. He has exposed corruption in the sanitary district through the indictment of a number of contractors; he reached into the County building with the conviction of Tax Assessor Gene Oliver, and into the state legislature with that of Representative O'Brien.

WOMEN TO WAIT TWO MONTHS TO SERVE ON JURIES

Women will not be called for jury service in Cook county for at least two more months, James J. McVicker, a member of the county jury commission, announced yesterday. This announcement followed a written request from Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby of the Municipal court that eligible women immediately be placed on juries in compliance with the referendum vote at the last November election.

The delay in calling women jurors has been caused by the difficulty in compiling a list of eligible women. The jury commissioners investigated for weeks to determine the best method in selecting the names and only recently it was decided to make use of the poll records. Several months will be required to compile a complete list, it was said.

Another matter which has retarded the use of the new system is the question of the validity of the law. Judges of the Superior court met yesterday and announced that a test case should first be instituted to prevent any mistrials.

FATHER DIES OF ACID THROWN BY HIS DAUGHTER

Hulit W. Herrell, 73 years old, died yesterday in his home at 410 North Peoria street of burns incurred on Jan. 29 when his daughter, Mrs. Alice Johnson, 30 years old, threw acid upon him and her brother, Columbus, 41 years old, as they lay sleep. The brother died several days later, and Mrs. Johnson was indicted on Feb. 16 for murder.

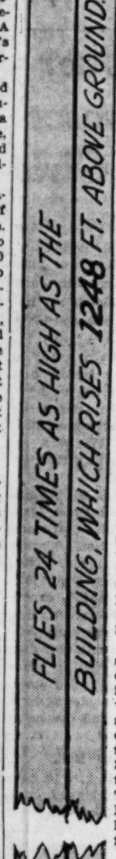
The acid throwing climaxed a family quarrel in which the father and his son reprimanded Mrs. Johnson for "staying out late and running around." Shortly after the Herrells retired, Mrs. Johnson, the police charge, threw the fluid on her brother's face. Some of the acid seared her father's face.

AVIATRIX SOARS SIX MILES AND BREAKS RECORD

Ruth Nichols Fights Gale and Biting Cold.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 6.—[Special.]—A Westchester society girl in a reindeer skin suit and a cerise and cream colored airplane flew six miles above Manhattan's tallest skyscraper this afternoon and returned to earth with a new altitude record for women and a red nose. The girl was Ruth Nichols of Rye, and before she rode alone, higher than any woman ever had flown before, she already had done distinguished air pioneering.



With scarcely a gallon of gasoline sloshing in the tank, she dropped down out of a 100 mile gale and a 60 below zero temperature with two altimeters registering 30,035 and 30,045 feet. The record of 27,418 feet had been held by Miss Elinor Smith of Long Island. Lieut. Apollo Soucek holds the men's record of 43,166 feet, established over Washington on June 9, 1930.

"It was very interesting," said Miss Nichols a few minutes after she had been assisted from her plane. "I'd like to try it again. No, I was not dizzy and I had no tendency to faint. I was warm enough, but my tongue began to freeze because the oxygen from the tank out on the wing was very cold. The thermometer dropped as low as it could go long before I got to the top. It must have been more than 60 below zero up there.

"The wind was very strong—maybe one hundred miles an hour, and it blew me out to sea. I was forced downward several times by wind currents, but flew out of them. When I got to 30,000 feet I looked at the gasoline indicator. The gas was all gone, so I switched on a five gallon reserve and headed for home."

Miss Nichols' record is as yet unofficial. A sealed barograph placed in the plane by a government representative was sent to Washington for calibration, but it was said by Walter D. Ward, official timer, that Miss Nichols undoubtedly had attained a height of from 30,000 to 33,000 feet.

Swathed like an Eskimo in her reindeer suit, fur Labrador boots, a fur lined helmet, four sweaters, and five pair of stockings, Miss Nichols took off from Jersey City airport at noon. She was in the air an hour and thirty-two minutes. The plane skimmed toward Manhattan in the face of a gusty west wind and winged over Times Square, while a lunch hour crowd of hundreds of thousands watched it flash in the air. The flyer made for lower Manhattan at once and began her series of spirals directly over the head of the Statue of Liberty.

Miss Nichols said she reached the peak of her climb in about fifty-five minutes and that after she had reached 10,000 feet cloud banks shut off her view of the earth. At that stage of the flight she had been blown over the Atlantic.

Clarence Chamberlin, the trans-Atlantic flyer, who, with Mrs. Chamberlin, had helped Miss Nichols prepare for the flight, was the first to greet her when she landed.

Miss Nichols made her flight in a cabin monoplane—a Lockheed-Vega powered by a Wasp motor—loaned to her by Powell Crosley Jr. of Cincinnati. It was the same machine in which Miss Nichols recently set the east-west and west-east transcontinental records for women.

Union Chief Seized

JAMES P. GORMAN.

Labor warfare centering around the Michigan Cleaners and Dyers, 1339 West 63d street, yesterday flared into the open with the slugging of three guards hired by the cleaning plant, the arrest of three union officials and the three guards, and a series of running gun battles between police and men believed to have been union leaders. No one was hit in the gun battles.

The three union officials arrested near the plant after the gun battle are James P. Gorman, Morris Peterson, and Al Borris, all business agents of the Dye House Drivers and Chauffeurs' union, local 712, at 629 South Ashland avenue. The guards of the company, seized when found armed with lead pipes, are Alex Kalman, James Ivers, and William Nolte. The six will be arraigned in Grand Crossing court on disorderly conduct charges on March 11.

Trouble at the plant is said to be the outgrowth of a strike of union drivers over the use of nonunion delivery men charged with using passenger automobiles to hoodwink union men. A police guard has been stationed at the plant for the last week on the request of President Louis Hallman. Picketing by union men has been in effect.

Gunfire first broke out at 63d and Peoria streets where a group of men in a large sedan fired at a man cringing beneath a porch. Police chased the gunmen's car to 59th and Morgan streets, exchanging fire. The gunmen's car was lost in traffic. The man fired upon identified himself as Ray Lynch, 6132 South Peoria street, connected with neither the union nor cleaning plant. The guards were hired to protect nonunion drivers, Mr. Hallman said.

He Has 'Eating Tobacco' and She Has a Divorce

Los Angeles, Cal., March 6.—(AP)—James C. Houdyshell chewed his cut plug contentedly today and his wife, Ethel, has a divorce. Houdyshell acquired the "eating tobacco" habit five years after they were married, Mrs. Houdyshell yesterday told Superior Judge Robert H. Scott, and when she objected he said he "would not give up his chewing for any woman."

Dies of Stroke as She Hears Scream in a Radio Play

Lynn, Mass., March 6.—(AP)—A woman's scream, broadcast two weeks ago in the course of a radio mystery play, was so realistic that Mrs. Cecil H. Dane suffered a paralytic shock. She died yesterday.

fairs, probably will face charges of contributing to delinquency of minors.

Investigator Leslie White found a card index in Miss Day's room at the "love market" headquarters with the trapdoor and subdued lights.

Lists Dozens of Girls.

The index listed names, phone numbers and data about dozens of girls, in a fashion indicated by the following excerpt:

"Pat. Gets drunk too easy."
"Martha. Bad complexion."
"Pat No. 2. Too old."
"Jean. Wears clothes badly; looks sloppy."
"Connie. Is a good girl; prospect."
"Doris. Engaged to marry."
"Camille. Looks all right."
"Mickey. Won't come in."
"Mary. Got spiffed Labor day."
"Mercedes. Talks too much. Tells all she knows; dangerous."
"Billy. Pretty and prospective."
"Leah. Out. Too unrefined."
"Helen. Out. No snap."
"Dorothy. Too tall; out."
"Dorothy No. 2. Out; too old."
"Iris. Has a steady."
"June. Wants too much money. Out."
"Alice. Decent girl, but wears a red coat."
"Grace. Tall, dumb, and out."
"Gail. She's a good prospect."
"Millie. Does things on the sly."
"Lolita. Can't seem to make friends."
"Helen. Out. No snap."
"Katherine. Only 13, too young."
"Josephine. Thinks she's worth $1,000."
"Fern—Too easy."
"Fern's sister—Always objects to what Fern does; talks too much."
"Maxine—Good prospect."
"Jeanne—I found out she doesn't keep her word."
"Marie—Since leaving school is hard to contact."
"Adele—No splash."
"Lillian—Much too fat."

Takes Prospects to Lunch.

Investigators said Miss Day took the girls who were "prospects" to lunch or to the theater while sounding them out. Those who expressed interest in the woman's preliminary remarks were given a more detailed outline of how they could buy themselves fur coats, or obtain comfortable amounts of spending money; those who expressed distaste or disinterest, were quickly dropped.

"The Day woman drilled into the minds of girls who came under her influence, the motto that 'nothing is wrong; only the thinking so makes it so,'" said the investigator. "But for herself, Miss Day retained a more fatalistic motto: 'Life is like a cup of tea; the more heartily we drink, the sooner we reach the dregs.'"

Beginning with entries dated Jan. 1, 1928, the woman had filled out almost a complete diary, not more than twenty days being missing.

An entry dated Jan. 27, 1931, read: "Spent the afternoon with L—— [a girl]. Took snaps of her for my book. Started in on the German class at Hollywood High school, and I may get a girl from the Hollywood Studio club [living quarters kept up by philanthropically inclined as a residence for extra girls in motion picture]."

Jobelmann declined to make any statement. "This is a terrible, disgraceful position to be placed in and I will not flaunt myself in any way," Miss Day said. "Later perhaps I can realize it all. I can not make a flat denial of all these things; I can't even say that I know nothing of the John Mills and Clarice Tauber case. I can't say anything now, however.

"It was loneliness that threw me together with Jobelmann in the first place. My mother shot herself in Boston. I was alone in the world."

Notations in a book which Miss Day wrote in longhand, and which was titled "Milestones," contained data which the district attorney expects to use. It indicated that "fees" of over $200 were paid by wealthy men for the visits of some of the girls, and that Jobelmann and Miss Day insisted that their male patrons pay money to them, instead of to the girls, as Jobelmann preferred to do the splitting of fees, rather than to wait for the girls to check in to him at the Hollywood "love market."

Kansas City, Mo., March 6.—(AP)—A verdict of acquittal today ended Mrs. Myrtle A. Bennett's bridge game slaying trial.

The jury charged with determining whether this widow of 35 feloniously killed her husband, John G. Bennett, freed her after deliberating eight and one-half hours.

Upon hearing the verdict Mrs. Bennett wept, smiled, and again was tearful.

"I thank you," she sobbed to the jury, as J. Francis O'Sullivan of defense counsel placed his arms about her to support her in her chair.

Former Senator James A. Reed stood above her, grim from two weeks of legal battling to establish that Bennett's death was accidental and not the deliberate act of a wife enraged by her husband's slaps in a bridge game quarrel.

Telephones Her Mother.

Before leaving the court building Mrs. Bennett hastened to telephone her mother, Mrs. Alice Adkins, who collapsed after taking the stand in her daughter's defense.

"It has been from first to last a frightful ordeal," Mrs. Bennett said. "The loss of my husband, whom I loved, and then to be charged with his murder and subjected to this long trial has been almost more than I could stand. Words can never express my thanks for my vindication."

Former Senator Reed, wearily retiring from the courtroom, said:

"Of course I am gratified. But I'm out o fthis Criminal court business."

The Fatal Bridge Game.

A contract bridge bid of four spades that wasn't fulfilled caused the quarrel between the Bennetts.

Bennett and Mrs. Bennett were the opponents of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hofman in a Sunday evening game Sept. 29, 1929, for stakes of one-tenth a cent a point.

Bennett bid one spade. Mrs. Hofman raised to two diamonds, Mrs. Bennett jumped to four spades, and Hofman doubled. Playing out the hand, Bennett went down two tricks. His wife called him a "bum bridge player."

It was testified Bennett became enraged, slapped his wife four or five times, and rushed about the Bennett apartment, packing his clothes to leave.

Mrs. Bennett testified he told her he was leaving immediately on a business trip which he had planned for the next day and instructed her to bring his pistol, which he was in the habit of carrying while on the road.

She said she obtained the weapon from her mother's room and in approaching her husband stumbled against a chair. The weapon was discharged, she said, and Bennett rushed forward, twisting her arm as he grappled with her. The automatic pistol went off again, she testified, and her husband slumped to the floor.

"I'd rather have been dead myself," the sobbing widow told the jury in denying that she had fired deliberately.

A paperhanger and a building repair man testified they had seen Bennett slap his wife—once when he became enraged over finding a shirt unlaundered and again over a necktie.

Bennett, district representative of a perfume company, carried $30,000 in life insurance, which will be the subject of litigation. The money will go to the widow if it is decided in the civil suits that she did not feloniously kill her husband. A verdict against her would permit payment of the insurance to Bennett's blood relatives.

SIX DEATHS IN AUTO ACCIDENTS MAKE TOLL 226

Six deaths as a result of automobile accidents were recorded yesterday in Chicago and Cook county. The fatalities raised the 1931 county toll to 226. The victims:

Doefin Wall, 8 years old, 1805 North Kedzie avenue. Fatally injured when struck by an automobile while playing marbles in the street in front of his home. The driver was Martin Olsen, 4639 Schubert avenue, a salesman.

Mrs. Julia Mills, 59 years old, 1734 Balmoral avenue. Died at the Edgewater hospital of injuries incurred March 4 in an automobile collision at Balmoral and Damen avenues.

Joseph Biondo, 64 years old, 1038 South Sangamon street. Died at St. Luke's hospital of injuries received Feb. 26 when he was struck by the automobile driven by Emil Kahn, 431 Aldine avenue, at Roosevelt road and Wells street.

Wilhelm Gerra, 40 years old, 3555 South Marshfield avenue. Died at St. Mary's hospital of injuries received Thursday when he was struck by a hit and run driver at Ashland avenue and Emma street.

John Noonan, 53 years old, 2710 North Kedzie avenue. Killed when struck by an automobile driven by Leo Starck, 2854 North Kostner avenue, at Maplewood avenue and Logan boulevard.

Unidentified man about 65 years old. Killed when he was struck by an automobile driven by Harry Kochman, 2632 Winona avenue, at Ashland avenue and Augusta street.

Edward P. Daly Jr., 23 years old, son of a live stock commissioner living at 936 Wade street, Highland Park, was found bruised and unconscious last night beside his automobile in Sheridan road, Kenilworth. He was taken to the Evanston hospital. Daly, a cattle buyer for Swift & Co., was found by Paul H. Owsley of 337 Cedar street, Winnetka. The right side of his machine was nicked and scratched, indicating a collision.

John J. McDonald, 35 years old, of Waukegan, and Mrs. Ruth Budal, 31, of Kenosha, Wis., were seriously injured late last night when McDonald, blinded by the bright lights of an approaching automobile, drove his machine into the side of a passenger train of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific road near Russell, 15 miles northwest of Waukegan.

ASK STATE PROBE OF CONDITIONS AT CHILDREN'S HOME

An investigation of the Du Page county home for dependent children was urged yesterday on Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom after the third continuance of a taxpayers' suit to enjoin the county from executing a contract to maintain the home in new quarters under the present management. The demand of the suing taxpayers declares conditions in the home warrant criminal prosecution.

The inquiry was asked by Mrs. Gertrude R. Angell of Wheaton in behalf of herself and four other taxpayers bringing the action, and by Chauncey McCormick, vice president of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, whose assistance was enlisted by the complainants. The letter to the attorney general states that State's Attorney Chauncey W. Reed of Du Page county and Rodney H. Brandon, director of the state department of public welfare, have refused to take action.

Twenty-four Children in Home.

The present home, three and one-half miles southeast of Downers Grove, is operated by Mrs. Maybelle Reese. Twenty-four children are housed in the white eight-room house, among them a delinquent boy of 14 years. Mrs. Reese had a license from the state department of welfare to conduct the home for ten children, which was revoked in 1930. Her staff consists of her mother, who acts as matron for the older children, and her husband, who acts as caretaker. The Reeses have two children.

In November the county supervisors leased from Jacob Klein a three story frame home with eleven rooms a half mile north of the present home. Klein, a former deputy sheriff, was sentenced to 14 years in the penitentiary for murder in 1922 and was pardoned a year later by former Gov. Small because of ill health. The county agreed to pay $200 a month rental through 1935. A few miles away Mr. McCormick owns a 160 acre farm with a more modest home which he leases at $100 a month.

Make New Contract.

In December the supervisors entered into a contract with Mrs. Reese for 4 years and ten months beginning Jan. 16 to manage the home. It provides that she receive $1,250 a month, less a deduction of $100 for rent in the event the number of wards are less than 50. The contract provides $25 additional for each child above that number, and that Mrs. Reese be required to meet a greater share of the rent as the number of wards increases. It provides for a maximum of eighty children. Mrs. Reese is empowered to take in private wards, keep her own accounts, and contract for supplies in her own name.

A bill for an injunction against this arrangement was filed by Attorney W. V. Bardwell, representing the taxpayers. The complaint charged the contract invalid in that the county failed to submit it to a referendum and that the home was unnecessary. The children's aid society has offered to place all the children in homes and has approved a denominational home at Bensenville. Before the establishment of the county home three years ago the society provided homes for 25 children, where it now provides for four.

As the suit was pressed the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, which for almost 50 years has been interested in juvenile reform in placing dependent children in homes rather than institutions, removed four children from the Reese home through court action. The children told of receiving fresh milk only with their breakfast cereal and canned milk with other meals. Workers of the society reported conditions to be deplorable. Mrs. Reese is said to have opposed medical attention for the children. She denied admittance to investigators of the society and taxpayers, they reported.

Appeal to Brandon.

The society appealed to Director Brandon. He replied: "The first thing I realized when I went into this is that there is no recipe for unscrambling eggs so we have to make the best of the eggs in the scrambled condition we find them . . . we will cross our bridges when we get to them."

The taxpayers invited the support of the society in their action. Attorney Charles W. Hadley appeared at the hearing yesterday to represent Mr. McCormick and Mrs. Robert R. McCormick. Attorney Hadley announced that he would lend his support to Attorney Bardwell. For the third time the case was continued at the request of State's Attorney Reed. Circuit Judge Frank W. Shepherd set the trial for March 14.

After the hearing Mr. McCormick and a reporter visited the home. A dirty faced child peered at the visitors from a second story window through the bent bars of an iron bedstead. Mrs. Reese and her mother, in stiff white ensembles, received in a hallway transformed into a dining room. Two beds were in each of the front rooms.

Mrs. Reese refused permission to inspect the premises, saying that State's Attorney Reed had asked her to do so. However, she extended an invitation to return at a later hour for a tour with the Du Page County Lions club, sponsored by Reed. She declared her training to be theoretical. She refused to discuss her bill of fare, sanitary conditions, or segregation of children.

Add Rooms in Basement.

At the Klein house the visitors met Roy Klein, son of the owner, who is to act as caretaker of the home. Roy averred that he had instructions to keep out visitors. He mentioned that six rooms have been added to the house in the basement and as many more are to be added in the attic.

"The building in which Mrs. Reese is endeavoring to conduct the boarding house is not fitted or adequate for the care of more than ten children under the age of 16," the letter to Attorney General Carlstrom reads.

"The license was canceled because of her refusal to follow instructions of the department and because of her taking more than the proper number of children."

RANGOON, Burma, March 6.—(AP)—Fire starting in rubbish nearby today spread to the famous Shwe Dagon pagoda and destroyed several costly tazaungs, or carved wooden structures, containing images to which costly offerings are made. The pagoda, which tradition says was founded in 585 B. C., is one of the greatest pilgrimage shrines of Buddhism.

The great Shwe Dagon pagoda has particular sanctity to Buddhists because it is credited with containing actual relics of Gautama and the three Buddhas before him.

The pagoda is about 370 feet high and is profusely covered with gilt from base to summit. At the base of the Pagoda hill are many monasteries.

SECRET DIVORCE IS GRANTED MRS. TONY BIDDLE JR.

Berlin Beauty Named as Co-respondent.

New York, March 6.—[Special.]—In a secret hearing Mrs. Mary Duke Biddle, heiress and prominent society matron, was granted a divorce today at Newburgh-on-the-Hudson from Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., wealthy clubman. Reports hinted she named a Berlin beauty as co-respondent.

The Biddles, considered leaders in the ultra-social sets of New York, Philadelphia, and Florida, were married in 1915, shortly after the wedding of the late Angier B. Duke, Mrs. Biddle's brother, and Cordelia Biddle, Biddle's sister. Two children, Nicholas and Mary, were born to the Anthony Drexel Biddles and now are with their mother.

Mrs. Biddle is the daughter of the late Benjamin Duke and heir to his fortune, estimated at $100,000,000. Her niece, Doris Duke, is known as the wealthiest debutante in the world. Biddle, known to his friends as "Tony," is a member of the prominent Philadelphia Biddles and is active as a sportsman. A recent report suggested he would would wed Mrs. Thompson Schulze, daughter of the late William Boyce Thompson, capitalist.

GUNMAN SHOOTS VICTIM IN STREET IN ROGERS PARK

Harry Doerk, 39 years old, father of four children, was shot twice and perhaps fatally wounded last night by one of two gunmen who stalked him and his father-in-law, John Goessl, 60, in front of the Gale school, 1631 Jonquil terrace, Rogers Park.

Robbery is believed to have been the motive. However, Rogers Park police said they learned that Doerk and Goessl are employed as telephone men in an alleged handbook at 9 South Clinton street, and began investigating this purported connection in the search for a possible motive.

The two men were on their way to their home at 1428 Juneway terrace and were in front of the school when two men came from behind and shouted: "This is a holdup!" Doerk and Goessl wheeled. As they did so three shots were fired. The former fell with two bullets in his body and was taken to St. Francis hospital in Evanston, where it was said he probably would die. The supposed bandits escaped on foot and were seen by Samuel Hasterlik, real estate agent at 1657 Howard street.

SCHOOL PUPILS ASKED TO SPY ON SPEAKEASIES

Will Report on Others Who Imbibe.

The organization of public school pupils into secret committees of "good citizens" to report fellow students who drink and to ascertain the whereabouts of speakeasies catering to student trade was determined upon by the Assistant Principals' club meeting in the Hotel Sherman last night.

Enthusiasm for the plan, which was suggested by Henry Mendelsohn, assistant principal of the Wendell Phillips High school, was aroused by a discussion of publicity given recently to liquor raids near the Hyde Park and Fenger High schools. Supt. William J. Bogan, in a speech, said there was evidence that student drinking was prevalent.

Instructed Not to Snoop.

"In my high school," said Mr. Mendelsohn, "I have found student help in such matters to be invaluable. Each teacher is asked to appoint about five of her most trusted pupils, who are instructed not to 'snoop,' but to keep their ears open. Often young rounders like to brag of their prowess.

"The police of the Stanton avenue station have promised us coöperation in raiding questionable resorts in school neighborhoods on the evidence brought to them by student investigators. Of course I do not mean that these 'good citizens' should go out and search for speakeasies," Mr. Mendelsohn said.

The speaker denied that the name of "dry snoopers" could be applied to the "good citizens" and also discredited the belief that the instructions to report drinking which would result in disciplining of the offenders would create bad feeling in the student bodies. Put to the group in the form of a motion, the plan was approved with much handclapping.

Two Held by U. S.

Frank and Edith Kahn, operators of fruit stores at 1504 and 1507 East 63d street, where Hyde Park High school students allegedly bought liquor, were held to the federal grand jury by United States Commissioner Walker yesterday.

Don Teeling, son of Lieut. George Teeling of the Woodlawn station, and Harry Rupert also were held to the grand jury on conspiracy charges. The four were arrested by state's attorney's detectives last week. Teeling, according to the testimony, brought the liquor which was purchased by investigators from a cutting plant at 6327 Harper avenue to the fruit store where it was sold by Mrs. Kahn.

According to Assistant United States Attorney William Parrillo, Teeling told him that his father obtained his job as clerk for Kahn.

Lieut. Moss, Author of Police Manual, Is Ill

Lieut. Stewart P. Moss, president of the Lieutenants' association and author of the Chicago Police Manual, who is attached to the Shakespeare avenue police station, is critically ill with pneumonia in his home at 2411 Nordica avenue. Lieut. Moss was stricken last Sunday. He is being attended by Dr. William R. Larkin. Last December Lieut. Moss was elected for the fifth consecutive time as president of the Lieutenants' association.

10 "DRY" YEARS' COST TO NATION OVER 4 BILLIONS

Congressional Record Figures Say So.

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—Ten years of prohibition have cost the United States $4,830,308,744 in revenue alone. The figures appeared in today's Congressional Record as part of the evidence submitted by Representative John J. Cochran Dem., Mo.], in support of a recent speech in the house.

In 1919, Representative Cochran points out, the federal government collected $365,211,252 in revenue on distilled liquors and $117,339,602 on fermented liquors, or $483,050,854 on both distilled and fermented liquors.

In Unlawful Hands, He Says.

"These figures," the statement continues, "prove that all that prohibition has done is to divert the manufacture of liquor from a lawful, regulated, controlled industry into an unlawful, unregulated, and uncontrolled industry, and to transfer the manufacture from government supervised wineries, distilleries, and breweries into the homes of the American people.

They further prove that the federal government has lost, on the basis of 1919 production and withdrawals, $483,030,854.47 in revenue each of the ten prohibition years, or $4,830,308,744.70 in all.

"In other words, the revenues the government might have collected on the lawful alcoholic beverage industry have gone as profits into the pockets of violators of the national prohibition law, and these profits have financed the greatest criminal ring in the history of the republic."

1,893,496 Stills Seized.

Another index to the extent of unlawful distilling in the United States under the operation of the national prohibition law, he says, is found in the number of unlawful distilleries, stills, and parts of stills captured by the federal prohibition officers during the 10 years of the law. The official reports state that 1,893,496 stills were seized during that period

"The figures for the individual years show a steady and enormous growth of unlawful distilling in the United States during the entire era," Representative Cochran declares. "They also show that no matter how many stills the government seizes in any one year there is always a greater number awaiting seizure the succeeding year.

"In 1926 former Federal Prohibition Administrator Andrews testified that in his opinion the federal officers did not seize more than one out of each ten stills in operation.

"If Gen. Andrews' estimate was correct, then it is apparent that not less than 18,934,690 unlawful distilleries, stills, and parts of stills have been in use during the 10 years of the prohibition law."

SHOT IN GUN ACCIDENT.

Cornelius McInerney, 40 years old, was seriously wounded yesterday when a revolver in the hands of John Koss, of Aurora, was accidentally discharged while being demonstrated in the garage at 615 West 74th street. McInerney, who is employed in the garage by Koss, was taken to the Auburn Park hospital.

A Night Letter from Ring Lardner

Tucson, Ariz., March 6.—[Special.]—Today was the birthday anniversary of ye modest undersigned, who is now rapidly approaching par. The occasion was celebrated in South America, where a dinner dance was given, at which the Prince of Wales was a guest. In Chicago and San Francisco the stores opened at nine and closed at half-past five. The New York stock exchange remained open only until 3 o'clock. The New York World did not publish, and the streets were filled with people enjoying an involuntary holiday. All the branches of the Bank of United States stayed closed. In Niles, Mich., the hero's birthplace, a piece of confetti was picked up by a street cleaner, who mistook it for part of an aspirin tablet. RING LARDNER.

Boy of 5 Found Dead in Chicken Coop; Blame Fall

A search of more than eight hours by suburban and Chicago police for William Rock, 5 years old, ended late last night when his body was found in a chicken coop in the rear of his home at 2007 West 120th street, Blue Island. Police said he apparently had climbed upon a roost, 5 feet high, and fallen.

SWINDLER USES NAME OF RETIRED STORE MANAGER

Charles E. Priest, 2946 Pine Grove avenue, a retired department store manager, returned from a three months' vacation in Florida recently to find that a police character had selected his name and address from the telephone book and had used it when arrested and when sentenced in court. Priest complained to the authorities and yesterday they completed their investigations and publicly announced that Paul Antoine, now a Bridewell prisoner, had used Priest's name.

When Priest returned from his Florida trip he was embarrassed and annoyed by remarks of his friends to the effect of, "When did you get out of jail?" They had read of his supposed conviction in the newspapers which, on Feb. 6, through an error in police records, represented Antoine as Charles E. Priest of 2946 Pine Grove avenue. Priest called for an investigation and it was then discovered that Antoine when arrested last month had selected Priest's name for use when arrested.

Antoine is now serving a five months' sentence for having swindled various merchants and lawyers by posing as the son of former Judge Milton Sloss of the Supreme court of California.

BLIZZARD SHUTS OFF ALL POWER IN QUINCY, ILL.

No Light, No Newspaper, No Factories Running.

Quincy, Ill., March 6.—[Special.]—A sleet and snow storm last night and this morning cut off the light and power service of Quincy and every western Illinois city between the Keokuk dam and St. Louis and paralyzed telegraph and telephone communications. This morning Quincy was practically isolated, with transmission lines, telephone and telegraph cables down and the city in darkness. Quincy remained without power or light the entire day. Every factory closed down and the daily newspaper had to suspend publication.

Department stores, office buildings, and banks had to depend upon gas, coal oil, or candles for illumination and every elevator in the city was stationary.

X-ray machines in hospitals could not be operated. The local radio station was not on the air today and there was no radio reception.

State Fights First Snow.

Springfield, Ill., March 6.—(AP)—The state today marshalled its forces in the first real combat of the year with the winter.

With ploughs distributed throughout the entire snow laden area of central Illinois, the highway department was holding its own in keeping state roads cleared for traffic.

Only a few blockades had been reported to Chief Engineer Frank T. Sheets, who bounded the Illinois heavy snow area on the north by an east to west line between Cambridge and Danville and on the south by east-west line from Collinsville, through Vandalia and Effingham to the eastern borders of the state.

An average of 6 inches of snow had fallen over the state this afternoon, and as high as 3 feet of snow had been reported in some sections.

Route Nine, near Bushnell, was blocked, and the department also had a blockade near Pana, where a 3 foot depth was reported, and on Route Six north of Rushville and on Route Three Near Lewistown. Routes Sixteen and Twenty-five, near Mattoon, were reported to be in exceptionally bad condition.

Mail Is Delayed.

Canton, Ill., March 6.—(AP)—More than 3 inches of snow have fallen here since late yesterday, and the roads are badly drifted in many places. Many minor motor accidents occurred during the night and the mail, most of which reaches here by truck, was several hours behind schedule.

Storm Moving Eastward.

Kansas City, Mo., March 6.—(AP)—The March storm which pounced upon the Rocky mountain region early this week moved eastward today.

Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico dug themselves out of drifts and shivered in near zero weather. In Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, however, an abnormal early spring had given way to wintry cold. Temperatures ranged down from 12 degrees to zero and snow fell in wide areas, changing to sleet and rain near the Missouri river.

The vanguard of the storm had crossed the Mississippi today and reached as far east as Terre Haute, Ind.

Girl's Story of Helping Dog Ends Larceny Case

The story of Violet Albert, 11 years old, of how "Tootsie," a German police dog came to the Albert home at 2021 Farragut avenue eight weeks ago, resulted in a charge of larceny being dismissed against her mother, Mrs. Adelina Albert, in Town Hall court yesterday. The charge was made by George Kienzle, 2043 Berwyn avenue. The girl testified she found the dog injured, nursed its wound and named it "Tootsie." Judge Leon Edelman dismissed the case, and awarded the dog to Kienzle who paid the Alberts $7.50 for its board.

COMPLETE JURY FOR JACK WHITE MURDER TRIAL

Supreme Court Ruling Helps Speed Case.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Michael Dorman, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Joseph Burke.

William Metrick, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary by Judge Ross C. Hall.

Claude Hailey, assault to rob, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary; Everett Curtis and Starr Allen, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years each in the penitentiary; James Moore, Peter Putman, and Earl Hammond, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years each in the penitentiary, by Judge John Prystalski.

The jury to try William J. (Three Fingered Jack) White, public enemy, on a charge of murdering Policeman Edward Pflaume of Forest Park, was completed yesterday in Judge Joseph Sabath's court. White is on trial for the second time. The Illinois Supreme court reversed his first conviction three years ago.

JUDGE SABATH. [Tribune Photo.]

It took less than five days to complete the jury under the new system, put into effect in an important case for the first time. Judge Sabath proceeded under the recent decision of the State Supreme court which changed the law of 103 years' standing, making the jurors judges of the fact alone, instead of the law and the fact as formerly. The judge refused to allow the defense lawyers to ask the veniremen about questions of law.

Speeds Up Jury Selection.

The trial was started on Monday morning and the jury was completed before noon yesterday. Several intermissions were taken during the jury selection because of charges and counter charges by the attorneys, so it was pointed out by Judge Sabath that less than four court days were necessary to get the jury. At the former trial more than two weeks were required to select the jury.

"The new system certainly worked in this case," remarked Judge Sabath in complimenting the lawyers. "It should be a great time saver in all important cases."

Attorney W. W. O'Brien, chief defense counsel, pointed out that the lawyers had no alternative but to get a jury yesterday. The peremptory challenges were exhausted on both sides.

Under the new system the lawyers have few grounds for disqualifying veniremen and the twenty challenges allotted each side in a murder case were soon used up. Only 89 veniremen were examined.

Lawyers Argue Over Evidence.

The afternoon session of court was taken up with a controversy between Assistant State's Attorneys Harry Ditchburne, Ross Lee Laird, and James A. Brown and the defense attorneys, on how far the state can go in producing evidence against White.

The prosecutors contend they have a right to show that White, before the killing of Policeman Pflaume, had participated in two bank robberies and a street robbery. The defense attorneys contend that only evidence of the actual killing is permissible. The judge will decide the issue on Monday morning, when the taking of testimony is to be started.

TOUR STATE STREET FOR COURT BATTLE ON SUBWAY TAXES

In preparation for the legal battle scheduled to begin on Monday against the assessments for the proposed State street subway, attorneys, engineers and real estate experts of the city made a tour yesterday of North State street between the river and Chicago avenue which is to be widened to 115 feet to accommodate the tubes.

The hearing will be before Judge Edward M. Mangan, sitting in the Superior court. Property owners against whom assessments have been levied by the board of local improvements have protested that the assessments are too high and that the subway is a general and not a local improvement.

Hollywood, Cal., March 6.—[Special.]—Gary Cooper, film star, today was in Hollywood hospital under treatment for a near collapse. Dr. H. J. Starathearn said Cooper was weak and ill from after effects of influenza.

ARMY ADOPTS LATEST 10 TON CHRISTIE TANK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—The latest model 10 ton Christie tank has been approved for army use, it was announced today. The machine will be taken over from its designer, Walter Christie, and orders have been placed for additional tanks of similar model.

In its recent tests the tank developed a road speed of more than 40 miles an hour on rubber tires. On tracks it traveled for seven hours at a rate of 20 miles an hour. In another test, it covered 120 miles cross-country at an average of 21 miles an hour.

The special board which voted final approval consisted of officers from the general staff, the infantry, cavalry, and ordinance branches.

Children Found Wandering in Street Are Taken Home

Donnie, 5 years old, and his sister, Lily, 2 years old, who take walks almost every day together, were found wandering in front of 1548 West Lake street last night by Policeman Patrick Kelly of the Des Plaines street police station. Since they could not remember their last name at the station they were held there until claimed by their father, John Dravant, 1647 West Erie street. He had called previously at the Racine avenue station, to which, he said, the children were customarily taken when lost.

CHICAGO HOPES TO LAND 1932'S 2 CONVENTIONS

City Makes First Bid for Democratic Session.

than the appearance of former Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio, Democratic candidate for President in 1920, in the rôle of peacemaker between the dry south and the wet north. One heard the remark on every side today that Mr. Cox had brought himself into the picture as a possible compromise nominee.

Appealing for harmony in his speech which closed the debate in the committee meeting, Mr. Cox urged the north to recognize that the south desires to retain prohibition and urged the south to recognize that the north and west want some modification that will end the rule of gangsters and racketeers who fatten on the illicit liquor traffic.

Cox May Be Contender.

Although a resident of Ohio, where he owns a paper, Mr. Cox spends his winters in Miami, where he owns another paper. He possesses a good deal of influence in the south, which, together with the consideration that he hails from a northern state that may be pivotal next year, might operate to make him a formidable contender for the nomination.

Wet Democrats generally agreed today that Mr. Raskob's move in bringing the prohibition issue into the open with a concrete proposal was a wise one and would prove beneficial to the party. The drys were no less certain that the proceeding bodes the party no good. Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, sponsor of the eighteenth amendment, urged all Democrats to defeat Mr. Raskob's plan to obtain action on his proposal at the next meeting of the committee.

Sheppard Sees Trouble.

"The dissension which occurred at the meeting of the Democratic national committee when Raskob proposed his wet plank," said Senator Sheppard, "is but a feeble forerunner of what will happen if he succeeds in securing the recommendation he desires."

One of the significant developments of the day was the indorsement of the Raskob home rule proposal by numerous Democratic national committee women, including some from the politically dry belt.

"I'm for prohibition, of course, being from Maine," said Mrs. Helen C. Donahue, committeewoman from that state. "Maine was the first prohibition state. But the problem of national prohibition must be faced courageously and solved in the end, I believe, along the lines suggested by Mr. Raskob."

SMITH TO SUPPORT ROOSEVELT ONLY IF HE'S WET, IS REPORT

New York, March 6.—(AP)—The New York Evening Post said today it had learned from a reliable source that former Gov. Alfred E. Smith will fight the presidential candidacy of his old friend, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, if Roosevelt "pussyfoots on prohibition."

Gov. Roosevelt, the Post pointed out, is not anxious to commit himself further on prohibition, an attitude which the Smith supporters regard as a bid to the southern states for support. Roosevelt ran for governor as a wet.

The Post said it had learned that since the Roosevelt presidential boom has virtually come out into the open, supporters of Smith have been drawing up plans to prevent New York state's delegates to the 1932 national convention from being irrevocably pledged to Roosevelt.

The friendship between Smith and Roosevelt has long been celebrated in Democratic circles. Three times Roosevelt nominated Smith for President.

MUELLER TO ACT AT POLICE CASE HEARINGS TODAY

Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller announced yesterday that he will appear today before the city civil service commission to prosecute charges against twelve policemen. He withdrew from the prosecution on Thursday after a ruling had been made against him on the suggestion of Assistant Corporation Counsel Francis J. Vurpillat, who referred to Mueller as an upstart. Mueller's return to the prosecution was on the agreement that Vurpillat will have no part in the proceedings.

"I had no fault to find with Maj. Carlos Ames, president of the civil service commission," Mr. Mueller stated, "nor with his rulings. My objection was to the corporation counsel's office interfering with us in a duty we assumed at the request of the commissioner of police."

Contempt proceedings brought against Mrs. Shirley Kub, once an investigator for Acting Police Commissioner Alcock, were continued until Monday when she appeared in court yesterday and announced she had seven lawyers engaged to defend her. Chief Justice McGoorty had assured her she need only appear before the special grand jury and answer questions regarding her knowledge of police corruption and the contempt charges would be dropped, but she said she preferred to take chances on going to jail.

Tells of Reorganization Plan for Closed Bank

Plans for a reorganization in connection with the closed Crawford State Savings bank are progressing, and an announcement will be made soon, it was stated last night by Attorney Daniel A. Uretz, chairman of the depositors' protective committee. Mr. Uretz urged depositors not to sell their deposit books and to file their claims with the receiver, who is cooperating with the committee on reorganization.

Business Men Urge Chicago as Convention City of 1932

The prospects for Chicago's selection as the national convention city for the Democratic or Republican parties next year brought optimistic comment from several business leaders last night.

Melvin A. Traylor, banker and Democrat, said: "I certainly would like to see either of the national conventions in Chicago next year, especially the Democrats. It not only would be a fine thing for Chicago, but a fine thing for either party. Illinois is now regarded as a debatable state, and either of the major parties would do well to select Chicago for strategic reasons."

Natural Convention City.

James Simpson, of Marshall Field & Co., said: "We should use every effort to prevail upon either or both of the national committees to bring their conventions to Chicago. This is the natural convention city. We are centrally located and readily accessible to all parts of the country. We have more to offer than any other city. We have every facility for accommodating the convention. We should go after them in such a way as to bring them here, just as we did the National Air races last year."

Silas Strawn, lawyer and chairman of Montgomery Ward & Co., said Chicago would benefit greatly as host to the national convention.

"Neither party could do better than to choose Chicago," Mr. Strawn said. "We have the three essential requirements to offer them, accessibility to all part of the nation, unequaled hotel and convention accommodations and the ideal summer climate. We should, by all means, exert ourselves to bring the conventions here."

Elmer Stevens for Plan.

Elmer Stevens of Charles A. Stevens & Bros., also declared for bringing the conventions here. "No American city can offer the inducements that we can in the way of interest, location and accommodations," he said.

Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Association of Commerce, was equally eager to have Chicago entertain the conventions. "Illinois is one of the key political states," Col. Randolph said. "The parties as well as the city would benefit by choosing Chicago."

KIN OF SINGER SUES ALEXANDER MOORE ESTATE

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 6.—(AP)—The executor of the estate of Alexander P. Moore, former ambassador to Spain, was charged on the witness stand today by Mrs. Dorothy Russell Calvit with failing to send her promptly a copy of her stepfather's will.

Mrs. Calvit, daughter of the late Lillian Russell, actress and singer, whom Moore married, explained that this and the illness of her attorney accounted for her delay in filing a contest, now in progress, for half of Moore's $600,000 estate. Moore died in California in February, 1930.

Following her appearance, the hearing was adjourned until March 23.

TATTOO MARKS ON MAN REVEAL HIM AS RED SPY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Poland, March 6.—Passengers from Russia in all probability will be subjected to more rigid customs inspection following the discovery by the Polish police of a "human letter," near Vilna, today.

Michael Petroff, on arriving from Moscow, attracted the attention of the authorities and a search revealed that his body was tattooed with a secret code and his arms and back were covered with signs. After being deciphered, the tattoo revealed coded instructions to Polish communists to start energetic propaganda among the sporting clubs.

PROTEST JUNK AND TRASH AT CITY GATEWAY

Ask Wolfe for Cleanup on South Side.

A campaign to clean up the south side gateway to Chicago along the rights of way of the New York Central and Rock Island lines has been undertaken by the South Central association, in an appeal to the commissioner of public works.

The association described numerous ugly sights, junk yards, trash heaps, and similar places along these two trunk line railroads, and deplored the fact that unfavorable impressions were left in the minds of visitors viewing these spots as they enter Chicago.

Junk Overflows on Sidewalks.

The association complained in particular against a large junk yard occupying the block bounded by 22d, Clark and Federal streets, and extending north almost to 21st street, lying along the east side of the railroads. The association charges the junk overflows into the street.

The corner lot across on the south side of Federal and 22d streets also is occupied by abandoned trucks, wrecked autos, and other junk. Both the northeast and northwest corners at 22d and Federal streets are used as dumping grounds for ashes and rubbish, and various other vacant lots in the neighborhood are used either for junk yards or rubbish disposal.

At Archer avenue and Federal street the sidewalks are littered with broken bottles, waste paper, and other rubbish.

Junk on 17th Street.

On the block between Federal and Dearborn streets, on 17th street, many worn out and dilapidated buses and trucks are strewn over the vacant lots on both sides of the street and even reaching out into 17th street.

In its letter to Commissioner Wolfe of the public works department the South Central association said: "We believe it is imperative that some action be taken immediately by your department to rectify these conditions. If you will assign an inspector to make a survey of the conditions of the streets and sidewalks you will find numerous spots that should be cleaned up immediately."

HUNT 3 YOUTHS WHO LOST TRUCK TO HIJACK CREW

Police last night were seeking three boys who were supposedly hijacked of a truck load of chickens, butter and eggs near Des Plaines, and gagged and tied to trees.

The boys, Richard Trudy and Edward and George Peckham, all about 17 years old and all from Hustler, Wis., were driving to the Chicago market. The only account of the case was given police in a relay report, telephoned first by the victims to their parents, and then by the parents to a Chicago friend who, in turn, notified police. The Chicago friend is Mrs. Henry Lohnke, 4732 Knox avenue.

According to the report the Peckham brothers and the Trudy boy were stopped by several armed men in Rand road near Des Plaines, taken from the truck, gagged, and tied to trees. Nothing has been seen of the youths since they left Hustler, nor anything heard from them since their phone call reporting the holdup.

350 Children March Out as Fire Destroys School

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 6.—(AP)—About 350 children were marched safely from their classrooms when a grade school at Harrah, twenty miles east of here, caught fire today.

THREATEN RIOT AS POLICE HALT MOVIE AT STAG

A near riot was staged last night when police, led by an investigator for the Illinois Vigilance association, raided Pilsen hall, 26th street and Albany avenue, and broke up a stag showing of an allegedly obscene motion picture attended by 2,000 men.

Only prompt reinforcements from nearby stations called by Jack Brown, the investigator, nipped what might have been serious disorder. As Sergts. Robert Griffin and George Mankowski ordered the show stopped, there were cries of "Throw the police out!" and "Let's get them!" Several squads of bluecoats arrived as the shouts threatened to assume more dangerous form.

The police arrested Al Glinka, 3006 Cullerton street; Neledzer Kaedaz, 4043 Cullerton street, and Alvin Schuh, 5118 Ohio street, as operators of the stag. They will be arraigned in Morals court today. The raid was staged on information by the Rev. Philip Yarrow, superintendent of the vigilance association.

City Contracts for 10,692 Tons of Water Main Pipe

Contracts calling for the delivery of 10,692 tons of cast iron pipe to be used as water mains were awarded yesterday by Commissioner of Public Works Wolfe at a price of $438,950. The order was split between the United States Pipe and Foundry company and the James B. Clow & Sons company, the former to deliver 7,201 tons and teh latter 3,491 tons. Each was the low bidder on the respective quantities. The contract specifies delivery in 15 days.

Hoover Names Indiana Man Asst. Controller General

Washington, D. C., March 6.—(AP)—President Hoover today gave a recess appointment to former Representative Richard N. Elliott of Indiana to be assistant controller general.

Hunt Bandits for $1,500 Daylight Holdup in Loop

Police last night were seeking two bandits who staged a daylight robbery on the edge of the loop yesterday. The pair held up Peter Bruhn, 5141 Grand avenue, Downers Grove, in a hallway at 31 East Congress street, and took $1,500 representing collections from three Bensinger billiard parlors. Bruhn, a collector, had just received receipts of the parlor at the Congress street address, and was descending the stairs with a colored porter when he was robbed.

VIRGIL FIGHTS FOR HIS LIFE ON WITNESS STAND

Weeps, Smiles, Fences with Prosecutor.

ther, and the plight of his mother, left to support a family by doing washing.

In the front row among the spectators was the mother, a matronly figure leaning forward to catch every gesture and every inflection of her boy's voice.

Across sthe aisle were Arlene's sisters, also watching the witness' features grimly.

Then came a question at which every one bent forward. It was:

"Virgil, were you acquainted with Arlene Draves?"

The defendant drew a sharp breath, struggling to keep back the tears.

"Brace up, boy, brace up," urged O'Hara.

Q.—All right now Virgil, tell the court and jury how long you had known Arlene Draves before her death? A.—About three years.

Q.—You recall the first time you met Arlene? A.—I do; we were out at Gay Mills, a dance hall in Miller, Ind., one night—a Sunday night, I think it was. We went out there and I came in the door to see who was there and I saw a girl standing over by the radiator. I didn't know her, but she appealed to me so much that I asked her for a dance.

Q.—So she appealed to you? A.—Yes, I asked her for a dance and we had one.

Q.—What happened after that? A.—Well, we were dancing on the floor, talking to each other, kidding like any young person would, and I asked her if I could see her sometimes, but she said no.

Too Young for "Dates."

Q.—She refused you? Why? A.—She said her folks wouldn't let her date until she was 16 years old.

"Did you tell her you were a college man?" O'Hara asked next. Kirkland smiled faintly and studied his stubby fingers a moment.

"I said I was a sophomore at Purdue and she said she was a senior at high school," he replied.

Q.—That was only kidding, wasn't it? Go on. A.—Well that was a Sunday night and on Monday—I was carrying ice that summer—I was getting ready to take ice off a truck and Arlene hollered at me and I turned around.

Q.—Go on, Virgil, and tell it in your own way. A.—She asked me what I was doing and I laughed and we stood and talked a while. I asked her where she lived and she pointed out the house. I told her I'd be over to see her that night.

His First Visit.

Q.—What did she say? A.—She said it wouldn't do any good, because she couldn't go out, but I said it was all right, that I'd come over anyway. I did go over and she came downstairs and we sat around on the porch, talking about things—just talked about a lot of things that meant nothing, then I left round 10:30 p. m.

Q.—How old were you then, Virgil? A.—I was 17 and she was 15 years old.

They saw each other frequently after that, the lawyer brought out. Arlene's sisters took her every Sunday night, he said, to the Gay Mills and there they danced.

"I would have every dance with her that I possibly could," Virgil said, "because we both loved to dance and seemed to hit it off pretty well."

Q.—Tell the jury the circumstances of your first date. A.—We were out at the Gay Mills one night and she said, "Virgil, do you want to go for a ride?" I wanted to go, so about 11:30 we started for Chicago with her sister and her sister's boy friend.

Q.—Where were you? A.—Arlene and I were in the back of the car.

Q.—Did you kiss her? A.—I did not. I had never kissed her up to that time.

Q.—What did you do, Virgil? A.—We were just talking and I had my arm around her shoulder.

Q.—Saying love's little sweet nothings, was that it, Virgil? A.—Yes.

Prosecutor Underwood objected, saying O'Hara was putting the answers in the mouth of the witness, but the answer was permitted to stand.

Q.—Tell the jury, Virgil, all the circumstances surrounding your first kiss with Arlene Draves.

He Bursts Into Tears.

Here the witness began to weep. The jurymen who had been rocking back and forth in their chairs, turned and watched him intently as he brushed the tears from his cheeks with his fist.

"Brace up, boy, brace up," counseled O'Hara.

"Well," Kirkland began, "it was the time I was playing football for Horace Mann. It was the last game of the season. We were playing Froebel High at Gary and the other team was lots heavier than we were. I was playing in the back field. Froebel's full back weighed about 200 pounds. He got the ball and I run up real fast and stopped him and we both went down, knocked out cold. The coach ran out and asked me if I had been hurt. I felt around to see if I had any broken bones."

Prosecutor Underwood broke in.

"This is a murder trial, not a football game," he objected. "It's taken him five minutes to tell us about that game."

Q.—Virgil, you were injured in that football game? A.—I was injured severely.

Her Visits at Hospital.

Q.—And you went to the hospital? A.—I did, and was operated on, and while I was there Babe and one of her girl friends used to come in practically every time they could and talked to me and everything.

Q.—Yes, Virgil, continue. A.—Well, I remember they came in one night and Marjorie was laughing and said Arlene was going to do something for me. I couldn't think what it was, but when they were getting ready to go about 9 o'clock Marjorie said: "Here's your chance" and Arlene came over to the bed, leaned over and kissed me.

Tears began to well up in Kirkland's eyes, but he brushed his cheek with his fist and went on after O'Hara again counseled him to brace up.

Q.—Have you ever forgotten that kiss? A.—No sir, never.

Q.—Virgil, did you love Arlene Draves?

Sobbing now, Kirkland choked out: "Of course I did."

O'Hara turned to the bench and asked for a recess. The prosecutor couldn't see the necessity and Judge Crumpacker directed the defense lawyer to proceed.

Q.—Well, Virgil, you and Arlene remained sweethearts and you became engaged to marry, I believe? A.—We were.

Q.—You said Arlene promised to be your wife. A.—She did. She promised at a Sunday night party about two weeks before the tragedy. We were to be married on a Tuesday night following. We met at Tony Shirk's house for the purpose of announcing the wedding.

A Sudden Postponement.

Q.—After the party you started for Valparaiso, did you? A.—Yes, sir, we went there, but we weren't married. We had stopped at a friend's house on the way and Arlene said she felt sick. I said, "Arlene, sweetheart, if you feel that way, you're in no condition, and we'll put it off."

At last the interrogation came to the night of Nov. 29 and the incidents at the alcohol party at the Gary home of David Thompson

Q.—What did you do that night? A.—I called for Babe at the home of her brother-in-law, Murrell Clemens.

Q.—Then you went to the party. A.—No, not right away. Arlene wanted to see a girl friend across the street. We went over there and I called a cab and we waited about half an hour and started for the party.

Q.—What time did you arrive. A.—About 8:30. Dave Thompson and his wife were still dressing upstairs.

The First Drink.

Q.—What happened. Go right on in your own words. A.—Babe and I—Arlene I should say—arrived about the time I said. A little later the rest of the couples came along.

Q.—What then? A.—Four of the boys went out for liquor. I knew they were going for liquor because they told me when they were leaving.

Q.—Now before the boys left for the liquor—had there been any drinking? A.—O, yes, sir, just a little while before they left Evan Madera came in and was rummaging around the pantry and found about three-fourths of a pint of alcohol. It was straight alcohol and we poured some out and split it up between the girls.

Mr. Underwood was on his feet with an objection. He could see nothing material in this testimony, the prosecutor said.

UNDERWOOD—How many of you boys and girls were there? A.—Four of us, two boys and two girls.

UNDERWOOD—You didn't tell me that when I questioned you before your indictment. A.—Yes, I did, Mr. Underwood. I did say that. I told you there was three-fourths of a pint of alcohol mixed with water.

O'Hara Resumes Questions.

O'Hara resumed the questioning and Virgil's attitude, which had become militant in the clash with the prosecutor, relaxed again.

Q.—Did you take any liquor to the party? A.—I did not.

Q.—What happened when the boys returned? A.—They had a gallon of alcohol and a gallon of wine. Well, they took it into the kitchen table and drinks were poured.

Q.—Virgil, you heard one of the witnesses say you were on the davenport with Arlene Draves? A.—Yes, sir, it's true.

Q.—Were you lying with your arms around her, face to face? A.—Yes, sir. I was kissing her and she was kissing me.

Another objection came from Mr. Underwood. He couldn't see the purpose of injecting the love scenes when the girl had been killed by ravishment. He was overruled.

Q.—What were you doing on the davenport? A.—We were talking about love. We were lying there and wanted to be by ourselves so we went out on the front porch.

Q.—Yes, go on. A.—We went to the porch—it was dark—and we went to the settee and lay there—sat there with our arms around each other.

At this juncture, over the strenuous objection of Mr. Underwood, the defense lawyer drew out of Kirkland his version of the intimacies that took place between himself and Arlene on the porch. Back in the front row of the spectators Mrs. Kirkland sat with eyes closed, while Arlene's oldest sister, Mrs. Clemens, twitched her lips and one of her brothers muttered something to himself.

Q.—After that, did you go back and dance? A.—Yes, sir. Then we came back to the porch again.

Q.—What was Arlene's condition? Was she staggering? A.—Kind of staggering. Kind of—I don't know how to express it.

O'Hara stepped forward, close to the witness chair, and paused for the dramatic effect before putting the next question.

Q.—Did you slap her to bring her out of the daze? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you smack her? A.—I never in my life.

"What did you do?" O'Hara asked. Here the lawyer stepped up beside Kirkland on the stand, bowing his head. Kirkland gripped him by the back of the neck.

"That's how I did it. Here's what I mean," Kirkland exclaimed, shaking vigorously.

"Did the jury see that?" O'Hara demanded.

The jurors said nothing but a titter arose in the courtroom. O'Hara seemed provoked.

"Your honor," he pleaded, "if there be any more of that from the courtroom I ask that it be cleared. We are engaged in a law suit involving a human life here. This is a mighty serious business."

The judge cautioned the spectators to be silent.

Q.—After you shook her, she felt beter? A. — She did. We walked around the porch a little and sat down again. I was sitting on the right arm of the chair with my arms around her shoulders.

Another Demonstration.

Again O'Hara made himself a party to the demonstration. Playing Arlene's part, he sat down. Kirkland propped himself on the chair and O'Hara asked him what was said.

"I love you, I love you, you know I love you," Kirkland said earnestly, leaning over and talking into the lawyer's right ear. Again there was a titter, but O'Hara did not pause.

Q.—How long did that take? A.—I don't know. A few minutes. She was feeling dazed like.

O'Hara left the chair and Virgil reseated himself. Lifting a finger, the lawyer told the witness to tell the jury just what happened.

"She was feeling dazed and wanted to go in the house," Kirkland said, rising. "Then she fell like this"—and the boy stooped over, nearly losing his balance in the effort.

Q.—She fell? A.—Yes. Before I could reach down and pick her up, Dick Strutridge rushed across the porch from the other end and picked her up and set her back in my arms.

Wanted to Go Home.

Q.—Then what? A.—Well, she kind of revived. I asked her if she was hurt, and she said no. Then I asked her if she wanted to go home. She said she did and I said, "No, Babe; come out in the fresh air."

Q.—Yes, go on. A.—We were sitting in Paul Morton's car when some of the boys came out to drive down and get hamburgers.

Q.—Any conversation with Arlene? A.—I asked her if she wanted a sandwich and she said no. When we got back to the house I hurried in with the sandwiches.

Leaving Arlene in the car, Kirkland had a few more drinks, he said, and then prepared to take her home. He returned to the car, found her asleep, and himself fell into slumber on her shoulder.

Q.—She was asleep? A.—She seemed kind of dazed. I didn't wake up until we reached 8th street and Broadway. The first thing I remember her head was against mine and I said to the others: 'Boys, we better take her home; her sister will be getting worried.'

Q.—And did you take her home? A.—No, sir. I shook her and shook her and got no answer. I began to feel kind of nervous, so I had them stop at a restaurant and call a doctor.

Q.—Did you get one? A.—No, the doctor's house didn't answer. I said we ought to ride her around a little while. We got to 5th avenue and then we decided to try another doctor.

O'Hara Interpolates.

Here Mr. O'Hara covered the testimony given by the youth who telephoned the physician and, in testifying for the state, declared that at the time Virgil had said 'My God, I'm afraid she's dead.' Except for the even tones of the lawyer and witness the courtroom was still.

Q.—Did you see this boy? A.—Yes, I didn't know his name. I said something about Arlene being dead drunk or asleep or something. He felt her pulse and said she was probably all right, except for passing out. Her forehead was warm.

Q.—What happened then? A.—The boys came out and said they had found a doctor. I said, "All right, for God's sake, let's go." We carried Babe into the doctor's house and she turned out to be dead.

Testifying for the state, the physician, Dr. R. O. Wharton, had sworn that Kirkland and the other three boys, Paul Barton, David Thompson, and Henry Shirk, had sidled out the door against his order when he pronounced Arlene dead. The physician's testimony was that he fired two pistol shots in a futile effort to stop them.

Enter the Police.

Q.—What did the doctor say? A.—He said he was going to call the coroner and the police. He told us not to leave, but I went out to the car to get Babe's coat, hat, and shoes. As I got into the car the boys started to drive away and I had to ride along. I was stunned. I asked where they were going. I told them to take me over the Clemens house. They said I could walk if I wanted to go there, so I got out and walked.

Q.—What happened when you reached the Clemens home? A.—I rang and some one called: "Is it Babe?" I said, "No, it's Virgil." Mrs. Clemens fainted when I told them Arlene was dead. Murrell Clemens took her to the bedroom and I walked in and said: "This hurts me more than it does you."

Kirkland had finished his story. The spectators relaxed. His mother came forward and kissed him. He returned to the lawyers' table and slouched back in his chair until Sheriff Maxwell came to lead him to the anteroom.

There he enjoyed a cigaret, chatted with the sheriff and his deputies, and when Mr. O'Hara came out threw an arm around his shoulder.

"You're all right, old fellow," said O'Hara, and Kirkland smiled.

Cross-Examination Starts.

Mr. Underwood opened the cross-examination by bringing out that Kirkland was born Virgil Hopper and had never legally assumed his stepfather's name.

Q.—You heard a witness here testify that you had told him that if "Arlene didn't come across with you you'd beat hell out of her?" A.—I never said it.

Q.—You admit the boy asked you the question? A.—He asked me what I was getting out of Arlene, yes, sir.

Q.—And your answer? A.—I told them I wouldn't tell them if I was. I said, "You're a bum bunch of sports to ask such a question." I told them to stop the car and I got out.

Q.—You were so offended? A.—Absolutely.

Q.—Isn't it a fact that you were expelled from high school? was the next question.

The defense attorneys were instantly on their feet with an objection.

"Play fair, Mr. Underwood," said O'Hara. "I thought you wanted to stay within the issues in this case. Well, do it."

The prosecutor withdrew the question and abandoned his effort to bring into evidence the fact that Kirkland had been dismissed for an offense described in the school records as "sexual delinquency."

Proves Hard to Trap.

The prosecutor went over every point in Virgil's direct testimony, striving to trap him in a discrepancy, but the witness was not to be trapped.

Q.—You had a party at Tony Shirk's before dragging Arlene off to Valparaiso? A.—It wasn't that way, Mr. Underwood. She wanted to get married. She even talked it over with people at the party, as they testified here.

Q.—Anyway, you failed to get married? A.—Yes, sir, it happened just as I told it here.

Q.—When was the second party organized?" A.—I don't know. I didn't organize it. I was invited.

Q.—You knew it was a liquor party? A.—I did not. I didn't bring any liquor.

Q.—Didn't you, when this party was organized at a roadhouse, draw a picture of a liquor bottle on a table cloth, indicating it would be a drinking party?

For a moment Kirkland studied his fingernails, then looked up and squinted at the prosecutor.

"I didn't understand the question," he averred.

Witness Turns Interrogator.

Underwood directed the clerk to read the question.

"Well," the witness answered slowly, "if I did that it was only kidding, like boys will do. You know, Mr. Underwood, there's liquor at every party of young people nowadays."

"I know nothing of the sort," retorted Underwood.

Kirkland—Mr. Underwood, did you ever see a party of young folks where there wasn't lots of liquor? Mr. Underwood—Never in my life.

Kirkland—You didn't, Mr. Underwood? Underwood—nevr.

"Now, now," the judge chided. "Mr. Underwood is not on the stand. Let the prosecutor put the questions and the witness can answer."

Q.—Where was this davenport you spoke about? A.—It was in the living room. We danced a while and lay down.

Q.—You were spooning there in the presence of everybody? A.—Well, yes, I guess we were. Everybody was spooning, with their wives, you know.

Q.—You didn't have relations with Arlene in front of the restaurant? A.—Of course not.

Q.—And you didn't see Barton have relations with her? A.—No, sir. I was stunned when I found she was dead. I didn't nudge him there in the restaurant.

Q.—But you had blood on your hands and washed them? A.—I washed my hands like anybody would. There wasn't any blood.

Underwood next wanted to know why Kirkland hadn't picked up Arlene after her fall on the porch.

Slug Arlene? Never!

"I was stunned. Her falling like that," was the answer.

Q.—The thing that stunned you was that you slugged her on the jaw and she fell—wasn't that it? A.—Mr. Underwood, I never struck Arlene. She was my sweetheart."

Q.—Why didn't you take Arlene into the restaurant? It was cold outside and you testified she had been dazed. A.—Mr. Underwood, I wouldn't take any woman into that place. It isn't a fit place.

Q.—But you went in yourself, washed your hands, bought sandwiches, and ate them

For the first time in the examination Kirkland had no answer.

Q.—Virgil Kirkland, you know what was going on that night with Miss Draves? A.—What do you mean?

Q.—It's all a mystery to you—the bruises you heard these doctors tell about; the head injuries and internal injuries? A.—It is. Very much so.

This wound up the examination. At O'Hara's announcement of no further examination Kirkland stepped down jauntily and walked to his chair.

The defendant's mother testified next. She gave the date of his birth. Then she was dismissed.

Dr. George F. Bicknell of Kane Chicago, one of four physicians who assisted a second autopsy on the girl's body, closed the day's testimony.

In direct denial of testimony given yesterday by Dr. Joseph Springer of Chicago, Dr. Bicknell declared the examination revealed the precise internal injuries described by the state's first medical witness, Dr. J. B. Burcham of Gary, who performed the original autopsy. Dr. Burcham testified that the internal injuries were the principal cause of death and Dr. Bicknell agreed with him.

The Jury Is Bored.

He stated, however, that an organ which Dr. Burcham swore he had dissected was only partly opened by the surgical knife. The jurors, who have heard six medical experts testify, stared at the ceiling as Dr. Bicknell testified.

The defense indicated tonight that Dr. Springer might be called back in rebuttal. Prosecutor Underwood said that if Dr. Springer were recalled he would bring witnesses to "tell the jury all about him."

Sobs as He Tells of First Kiss

Virgil Kirkland as he appeared on the stand yesterday when he told the story of what he declares was his love for and courtship of Arlene Draves. He acted as if the girl's picture was constantly before him and at times as if he were anxious to shut it out of his mind. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

RESINOL HEALED EVERY PIMPLE

Writes Miss Klug

"For some years I have had a rough and pimply skin. I tried many kinds of skin lotions and creams, but none of them seemed to do any good. One day I saw your advertisement for Resinol Ointment and sent for a sample. The results were so good I bought a full size jar. It cleared away the redness and roughness and healed every pimple. Now I always keep a jar on hand, and am glad to pass along a good word for Resinol."

LOOP TAXPAYERS DROP SUIT TO AID COLLECTIONS

Agree on Compromise as City Faces Crisis.

Loop property owners yesterday accepted a compromise with the county board in their tax suit in order to avoid causing delay in the collection of 1929 taxes due April 1. The taxpayers took the action because of the threat of a new financial crisis facing the city and county governments.

The thirty loop property owners virtually came to the rescue of the county's tax spending bodies. Through their attorney, Lester L. Falk of the firm of Scott, MacLeish & Falk, they had sought petitions from the Circuit court to compel the board of review to hear their complaints against the 1929 assessments, which the reviewers had refused to do.

Hear Case After Collections.

Judge Thomas Taylor had indicated that he would grant the request of the petitioners next Monday. This would have meant that the board of review would have to reopen its hearings on the assessments and would have caused a delay of several weeks in the tax collection.

Yesterday Attorney Falk and Attorney Hayden Bell, representing the county board, submitted a proposition whereby the prosecution of the mandamus petitions before Judge Taylor will be stopped providing that the petitioners may press their charges in the County court after the taxes are collected. The agreement was unanimously approved by the county board.

Taxing officials regarded the compromise as a public spirited act on the part of the thirty taxpayers to prevent any further demoralization of public credit. Almost all of the local governments have run out of cash. Pay rolls and bills are being met by borrowing from other funds and by resorting to extralegal methods.

Action Cheers Officials.

Tax anticipation warrants for 1929 and 1930 have long since been sold and it has been reported as a certainty that 1931 tax warrants will not be purchased by the banks until the 1929 taxes are put into collection. The penalty date for the payment of 1929 taxes is April 1, but it has been announced that it will be a physical impossibility to have all of the tax bills in the mail before this date.

In view of this situation the report that the mandamus proceedings will not be pressed and that the work on the taxes may proceed without interruption was cheering to public officials. The compromise followed closely the announcement from County Clerk Sweitzer that he had suspended work on the tax rates because of the uncertainty in regard to the court proceedings.

The thirty petitioners had contended that the reviewers flatly refused to grant them a hearing. Had they won their point in court, which appeared likely, it would have opened the door to more than 22,000 other taxpayers who had similar objections and were only awaiting Judge Taylor's ruling before going to court.

Pledge Court Hearing to All.

As a party to the compromise the county board adopted a resolution recognizing the claim of the thirty taxpayers that they were refused a hearing before the board of review and guaranteeing them a thorough hearing later in the County court.

"It will simply mean," said President Cermak who offered the resolution, "that these taxpayers will have the same standing in the County court as if the board of review had actually performed its duty. This applies to every taxpayer in Cook county, large and small, whose complaint before the board of review remains unheard."

Another development in the tax muddle was the filing of a suit in the Circuit court by the Association of Real Estate Taxpayers to enjoin County Clerk Sweitzer from extending the taxes and restrain County Treasurer McDonough from collecting any of the 1929 taxes. Although the complainants were only ten property owners, the association announced in a statement that they represented thousands of other taxpayers.

Charge Illegal Taxes.

The suit charges violation of the Illinois constitution which they say requires that real estate and personal property should be taxed uniformly. Although personal property in Cook county in 1929 is in excess of the value of real estate, according to the suit, more than 85 per cent of the 1929 tax is being thrown upon real estate.

This association has been agitating against any tax payment for 1929. This method of opposing taxation has been frowned upon by civic organizations.

Divorce Revealed

MRS. CARTER W. MORGAN.

Mrs. Carter Williams Morgan, daughter of Harry Lee Williams, 220 East Walton place, won a divorce on Feb. 5 from Daniel C. Morgan, 168 East Pearson street, a broker, it was revealed yesterday in the records of the Circuit court. Mrs. Morgan is well known in society. Her bill, charging drunkenness, was filed on Feb. 3 and the decree was signed two days later by Judge Daniel P. Trude. This is one of the speediest divorce cases on record in Cook county courts.

The Morgans were married on Nov. 15, 1928, and separated on Jan. 31, 1931, according to the bill. Mrs. Morgan and her witness, Miss Eleanor Cochrane, 1422 North State street, testified that Morgan was intoxicated on an average of two times a week. The wife did not ask for alimony.

CITY CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY OF SHERIDAN'S BIRTH

Cermak Praises Soldier in Luncheon Address.

The 100th anniversary of the birth of Gen. Philip H. Sheridan, civil war hero, was commemorated yesterday in Chicago with services at his monument at Sheridan road and Belmont avenues, and again at a luncheon in the Hotel Sherman at which Anton J. Cermak, Democratic candidate for mayor, was the principal speaker. Similar birthday honors were being conferred upon the memory of the famous general throughout the county.

At 11 a. m., in the presence of a color guard and a detachment of troops from Fort Sheridan, Mr. Cermak laid a wreath on the monument. A guard of honor composed of wearers of the Distinguished Service Cross was present.

At the luncheon Judge Joseph Burke and Chief Justice John P. McGoorty were other speakers who recalled that the contribution of Ireland to the United States in the case of Gen. Sheridan was but one of many similar instances of Irish-American war heroes. Two soldiers who fought under Sheridan, Sergt. James Reed, 90 years old, and Frank Munsell, 89 years old, were present.

Cermak Praises Sheridan.

"It is eminently fitting," said Mr. Cermak at the luncheon, "that so many Chicagoans should gather here today to pay tribute to the memory of one of the greatest soldiers that the nation has produced. While born in New York, Gen. Sheridan was an active Chicago citizen for many years and was one of the most constructive forces in the rehabilitation of our city after the great fire in 1871.

"A leader among our great body of Irish-American citizens in the days of reconstruction, Gen. Sheridan was a potent factor in the development of Chicago and a dominant force in its civic affairs. It is men of the type of Sheridan who have done much for Chicago.

"Men of that type are needed today, men of vision, tolerance and courage to bring Chicago into its rightful position as the greatest city in the world.

Drank as He Wrote.

"The quality that endeared him to his soldiers and his fellow citizens was his humanness. It is interesting to note that in writing his memoirs he paused to have a drink now and then.

"Many of you who are here paying honor to Gen. Sheridan's memory are of Irish descent, but you are not more proud of him than are the sons of parents who came from countries other than Ireland."

The committee in charge of the Sheridan memorial services consisted of John F. Bolton, Leo J. Doyle, James C. Russell, Francis D. Hanna, M. Malachy Foley, Michael J. Howlett, James E. Gorman, Clayton Smith, Dr. Thomas B. Foley, Mrs. Elizabeth Conkey, Miss Mary McEnerney, Mrs. Glenn E. Plumb, Mrs. E. J. Fleming, P. A. Nash, Charles E. Byrne, and Ald. James B. Bowler.

RETURNED VOLIVA EXPOUNDS HIS PANCAKE WORLD

Holding to his theory that the earth is flat, like a stove lid or a flapjack, Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of Zion, returned to his home and flock yesterday, ending his second world tour. With him were his wife, Ida; his secretary, Carl L. Huth, and J. H. De Pew.

Voliva was met at the La Salle street station as he stepped off the Twentieth Century. Brisk questioning about his world journey, interviewers meticulously avoiding the expression, trip around the world, started Voliva on a detailed discussion of his belief the earth is flat, considered from a physical and not an economic viewpoint.

Using the stove lid or the flapjack as an illustration, Voliva pointed to the center. There, he said, was the north pole. The south pole really was, he added, the icy rim of the earth. According to Voliva the sun is, in reality only about 27 miles above the earth, and about 32 miles in diameter.

Voliva and his party drove to Zion immediately after his scientific discussion ended.

RICH YANK WEDS GIRL HE COURTED 26 YEARS AGO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, March 6.—John Hanke, a wealthy New York hotel man, today married the girl he courted 26 years ago.

Hanke was the son of a business man of Maehrisch Schoenberg and at the age of 19 he left his home and went to America. He became a millionaire. Before leaving, Hanke had had a love affair with a 16 year old girl, Catherine. She never gave up hope that her lover would return and marry her.

Ten days ago Hanke arrived with a staff of servants and traced Catherine. They were married immediately. The couple is now en route to the United States.

LEGGE IS OUT; JAMES C. STONE HIS SUCCESSOR

Resignation as Chairman of Farm Board in Effect.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—Alexander Legge, chairman of the federal farm board since it began operations twenty months ago, left the capital late this afternoon for Chicago, once again a private citizen.

President Hoover announced the acceptance of Mr. Legge's expected resignation at his regular 4 o'clock press conference, stating that his place as chairman would be taken by James C. Stone of Kentucky, the present vice chairman.

Before departing Mr. Legge issued a statement predicting the ultimate success of the program laid down by congress in the agricultural marketing act. At the same time he urged the farmers of the country to give the board fuller coöperation, saying that the real difficulty the board has to contend with "is the slowness of the farmers in getting together and acting collectively for their own good."

While saying he believed the twenty months which have elapsed since the board was organized will go down in history as the greatest general depression on record, Mr. Legge predicted that the bottom had been reached and that from now on there would be a gradual improvement in business conditions.

Farmers Sought to Keep Him.

The resignation of Mr. Legge did not come as a surprise to the capital. It had been assumed for several weeks that he would return to the International Harvester company at Chicago shortly after congress adjourned. In announcing acceptance of the resignation President Hoover said he knew he spoke for the whole agricultural community when he expressed his intense regret that private business affairs made it necessary for Mr. Legge to resign.

The President said he thought every farm organization in the country had urged that Mr. Legge retain his place. Mr. Hoover added that he had brought all the pressure he could to bear on Mr. Legge in an effort to persuade him to remain.

Charles C. Teague, a present board member, has been named vice chairman, succeeding Mr. Stone. The vacancy on the board left by Mr. Legge's retirement and Mr. Stone's advancement is not to be filled for two or three weeks. It is expected a man from the central states will be selected. No immediate change in board policies is expected to follow Mr. Legge's retirement.

"A Going Concern," Says Legge.

"The program has progressed to a point where the organization may be safely classified as a going concern," Mr. Legge said in his statement. "I sincerely believe the plan of operation to be sound and that the test of time will prove this to the satisfaction of all. While results may seem slow, it is not reasonable to expect that the condition which has been developing over generations could be corrected in any brief period, particularly when you take into acount the fact that the industry affected represents some six and one-half million individual producing units.

"Personally, I have a greater confidence in the ultimate success of the program laid down by congress in the agricultural marketing act than when I undertook the work some twenty months ago, and will coöperate in every way I may as a private citizen to bring this about.

"Those opposing the work of the board are making a lot of noise, but really represent a small percentage of the American public.

Tillers Their Own Enemies.

"Such opposition is not the real difficulty the board has to contend with, but rather it is the slowness of the farmers in getting together and acting collectively for their own good. Many of them seem to feel that through some mysterious process the problem can be solved without any action on their part—something that can never be done.

"To the six and one-half million farmers directly interested I wish to make the request that in the future they give the board an even greater measure of support than in the past."

SEEK TO AMEND DIVORCE LAWS ON DESERTION

Cut Time to Year, Lewis' Plea.

An amendment to the Illinois divorce code which will permit the granting of divorces on grounds of desertion after a period of one year instead of two years will be presented to the legislature next Tuesday by State Representative Robert M. Woodward of the Twenty-ninth senatorial district. This was announced yesterday by Chief Justice Harry A. Lewis of the Superior court following a conference in the judge's chambers.

The bill will be submitted at the request of Judge Lewis, who is at present hearing divorce cases and has for many years advocated reforms in the divorce laws.

Blow to Cruelty Charges.

The purpose of the bill, Judge Lewis said, is to eliminate many of the decrees granted on false charges of cruelty. Many married couples find it impossible to live together, the judge declared, and decide to separate for their own happiness. They take the easiest means of obtaining a divorce, which happens to be cruelty.

A two years' wait to obtain a divorce on desertion charges is not rapid enough for the unhappy couples, according to the judge. But a husband need only slap his wife twice and she can immediately sue for divorce.

Wants Honest Testimony.

"Too many divorces are won on trumped up charges of cruelty," Judge Lewis declared. "These divorces are obtained by perjured testimony and yet the judges are powerless to do anything about it. In many cases it is wise for the husband and wife to separate. If we can give them a divorce after one year's desertion so that the husband or wife can at least be honest in the testimony, I think we will have progressed."

Judge Lewis said that he will appear before the legislators to urge the adoption of the amendment. Many states have changed their divorce codes similarly, the judge said, with favorable results.

Records of the Circuit and Superior courts in Cook county reveal that a total of 10,100 divorces were granted in 1930, of which number more than 37 per cent were won on cruelty charges. Judge Lewis said he could not estimate what percentage of the divorces were granted on fake charges of cruelty, but several of his associates on the bench placed the figures as high as 75 per cent.

JUDGE FISHER MAKES TEST FOR COURT CHANGE

Comments on Evidence for Jury in Trial.

Judge Harry Fisher of the Criminal court, who is responsible, through test cases sent from his court to the Supreme court, for two radical changes in the criminal law, yesterday started another test case on its way to the reviewing court for decision. The case, if upheld, it was pointed out by attorneys, will virtually revolutionize criminal trials and will put the state court judges on a plane with the federal courts.

JUDGE FISHER.
[Bloom Photo.]

Over the objection of Public Defender Benjamin Bachrach, who was defending Frank Krejza, charged with stealing an automobile from John Brejcha, 4050 West 22d street, Judge Fisher orally commented to the jurors on the merits and demerits of the evidence introduced by both the defense and prosecution. The case is to be appealed.

The Present Court Method.

Under present procedure the judges give the jurors a series of written instructions handed to them by the attorneys for the prosecution and defense, covering the various points of law. The judge makes no effort to comment on the weight of the evidence introduced by either side.

State's Attorney Swanson, through Assistants Elmer Holmgreen and Daniel Covelli, coöperated with Judge Fisher in preparing the test case. The jurors in the case speedily returned a verdict of guilty in view of the judge's comments on the merits of the evidence presented by the prosecutors. The jurors did not know that they were taking part in a case of such importance.

Previous Test Cases.

Judge Fisher through his previous test cases has succeeded in causing the Supreme court to give a decision allowing the defendant in a felony case to waive a jury trial, and also was responsible for the recent decision which makes jurors judges of the fact only instead of the facts and of the law, as had been the practice in the courts for 103 years.

NEVADA HOUSE PASSES 6-WEEK DIVORCE LAW TO MEET COMPETITION

Carson City, Nev., March 6.—(AP)—By unanimous vote the lower house of the legislature today passed a bill which provides that applicants for divorce can file their complaint and obtain a decree after residing in Nevada six weeks.

The bill now goes to the senate, where its sponsors predicted it would pass.

Residence of 90 days is required at present before filing of a divorce suit. The legislation to reduce the time to six weeks is Reno's answer to 90 day laws recently enacted in Arkansas and Idaho.

The bill provides that divorce complaints can set forth the grounds for divorce in the words of the statute only, thus eliminating all detail of the domestic troubles unless the defendant requests a bill of particulars.

Opposition in the house vanished when a delegation of Reno attorneys and business men declared that Reno would lose eastern divorce business amounting to over three million dollars a year to Arkansas and Idaho unless immediate steps were taken to meet the competition from those two states.

GUARD CAPTAIN MISSING; BEGIN DOUBLE INQUIRY

Capt. James Tyrrell, supply officer of the 131st infantry, Illinois National Guard, has been missing three weeks, it was disclosed yesterday, and an investigation by state and federal authorities is under way.

According to Sergt. James J. Gorman, custodian of the 131st Infantry armory, 16th street and Michigan avenue, Capt. Tyrrell disappeared mysteriously about three weeks ago and has not been heard from since. Sergt. Gorman said that so far no shortage had been discovered.

Foch Speaks from Grave to Clemenceau

Sustains Pershing's Idea of an American Army.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"The Memoirs of Marshal Foch" [Doubleday-Doran].

No more important contribution to the source material of the late war exists than the memoirs of Marshal Foch and Gen. Pershing, both of which are presented to the world this year.

Gen. Pershing's memoirs will be published in two volumes on April 6. Marshal Foch's were published yesterday, in a translation made by Col. T. Bentley Mott, liaison officer between Marshal Foch and Gen. Pershing, a brilliant translation, one hastens to add.

The publication of the memoirs was hastened by the Clemenceau volume which appeared last year. Marshal Foch himself did not intend that they should be released until many years after his death, but the bitterness of the Clemenceau attack persuaded his family to change that plan. There is no direct statement that Clemenceau's vitriolic words influenced Marshal Foch's heirs, but that is self-evident.

Marshal Foch has answered that attack—and others—with the most effective of all weapons, the statement, without reserve and without elaboration, of the facts. He writes like a soldier—he doesn't even admit that there has been any controversy. He merely states what happened. And he wins the battle hands down.

The memoirs consist of three parts, a foreword and a preface in which he surveys the state of affairs in Europe before the war and briefly, very briefly, sketches the facts of his pre-war life. Those pages have a personal quality which immediately disappears as soon as he sets down the official record of his command.

The second part is a minute and meticulously detailed record of the events of 1914. After a very brief survey of the years between that and 1918 the events of the last year of the war are discussed with the same minuteness that he brought to the record of 1914.

The matter of Gen. Pershing and the preservation of the American army as a unit—which was part of the fireworks of the Clemenceau volume—Foch treats with calm reserve.

"I was emphatic on this occasion in once more assuring Gen. Pershing that no one desired more fervently than myself the constitution of American corps and armies and sectors in which American troops would fight an American battle, and that my best efforts were being directed to this end. I was indeed, firmly convinced that the soldiers of any country only give of their best when fighting under their own leaders and under their own colors."

That calm and reserve of the whole book as well as the caliber of the man are evidenced in two sentences which are in the summing up of the story of the first battle of the Marne. "Engrossed as I was in pressing matters which concerned my country's interests, I had no time even to mourn for my dead. But I did feel that if these willing sacrifices were not to remain sterile, it was imperative to exploit with the greatest rapidity the success that had been gained."

His dead were his son and his son-in-law, both killed on the same day!

"The Memoirs of Marshal Foch" are too important as documentary sources to be touched by the personal sentiments of the author, just as the father must needs be submerged in the commander. That is their tremendous strength.

Ghosts Recall Manga Reva as Men Forget

White Priest-King One of Many Marvels.

"Manga Reva," by Robert Lee Eskridge [Bobbs Merrill.]

It is a strange tale indeed that the author of "Manga Reva" tells. Robert Lee Eskridge, an artist well known in Chicago, went, like many another, to the south seas. In Tahiti Queen Marau told him of strange islands, "Forgotten Islands" (of the Gamier archipelago). Norman Hall urged him to seek them out because they were one group that nobody had gone to because the going was very difficult—nobody from the outside, that is—only fishing schooners.

Eskridge went. Nine hundred miles before they touched the first atoll. But it is about the most fabulous of all the forgotten islands that he writes, at length, Manga Reva. He spent eight months there—accepted from the beginning by the natives—because he danced the Charleston to their satisfaction! There he painted and sketched, but mostly he absorbed their strange and exciting history and came to know their strange traffic with ghosts.

The two things which make the book of unusual interest are the story of the mad priest who went to the island—lured by tales of its enormous wealth in pearls—and the record of the author's experiences with the mysticism of the natives. The latter interests this reader much less than the former, for the author gives me the impression of telling less than he believes, or knows, somehow, as if he had edited his experiences for readers who might be skeptical. You feel that he was convinced of the supernatural by his experiences, but he does not convince you of their actuality.

The story of Laval, the Jesuit priest, is amazing. The saga of his conquest of the people by sheer indomitable will is one of the epics of human persistence. He went to Manga Reva from Valparaiso, Chile, lured alike (so the tale goes) by the cannibal king and his subjects who might be saved for the church and the marvelous pearls which rumor said were valued at nothing by the natives.

Priceless pearls and priceless souls alike he yearned to gather for his church. His fight against the king and the high priest finally resulted—by sheer nerve on Laval's part—in his victory. Then began the reign of a Jesuit father as king of the islands. He sounds in Mr. Eskridge's story like one of the Pharaohs, so determined was he that great monuments should be built to the glory of God and himself.

A great cathedral, the ruins of which stand to this day, was built twenty times larger than ever could have been used. Laval had a gnawing passion for building. He insisted that labor be imported from outlying islands. He allowed nothing to interfere with his great building dream.

The population became decimated by hard work and disease—Laval only drove them harder. It is an epic story, attested to by vast ruins in a spot that has once again gone complacently and comfortably native.

Mr. Eskridge tells that story with such zest that it makes one wish to know more of it. A biography of Laval would be a thriller, done in the modern manner.

The book is illustrated by the author, who, now that it is written, is apt any day to jump on a steamer and go back to the garden which he planted in Manga Reva.

THE NEW BOOKS

FICTION.

The Sophisticates, by Gertrude Atherton [Liveright], is a penetrating story of today.

Strange Combat, by Sarah Salt [Brewer and Warren] is the story of a sophisticated journalist and an out-of-work boxer who dreams of future triumphs.

Restless Sands, by Marcel Prevost [Sears] depicts the love of a father and his son for the same woman.

Lucy Church Amiably, by Gertrude Stein [Imprimerie Union] is the latest opus from that esoteric pen.

Wide Open Town, by Myron Brinig [Farrar and Rinehart] is a passionate and vigorous tale of the growth of an American mining town.

The Phantom with Wing of Gold, by Vicente Blasco Ibañez [Dutton] reproduces the glamours of the greatest gambling palace in the world and pictures a carnival of reckless living.

Lacemaker Ickholm Has an Idea, by Gustaf Hellstrom [Dial] is a long chronicle of a Swedish family comparable to the "Forsyte Saga."

Sanctuary, by William Faulkner [Cape and Smith] is a hideous and terrific picture done with the touch of greatness.

MYSTERY.

Fourth Degree, by K. S. Daiger [Macrae Smith], tells of new and startling developments in the technique of crime detection.

Eye-Witness, by John Doe [Day], is an exciting story of the underworld by a well known author hiding behind a pseudonym.

The Craig Poisoning Mystery, by A. Fielding [Cosmopolitan], has a letter as a major clew.

Murder at the Pageant, by Victor L. Whitechurch [Dutfield], happens at a house party.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Mrs. Gaskell and Her Friends, by Elizabeth Haldane [Appleton], charmingly discusses the author of "Cranford" and her many friends.

A Vagabond Trouper, by Jefferson De Angelis and Alvin F. Harlow [Harcourt Brace], is a record of an adventurous theatrical career from the days of the old fashioned "variety shows" to the present.

Murder for Love, by Ione Quinby [Covici Friede], is about seven famous lady murderesses by a reporter of our town.

ABOUT PLACES.

Florida Fishing, by Capt. Stewart Miller [Watt], is a guide to fishing in southern waters.

Dawn in India, by Sir Francis Younghusband [Stokes], summarizes the history of the British in India.

A Pagan's Pilgrimage, by Llewelyn Powys [Harcourt Brace], is a record of the author's journey to the Holy Land.

NONFICTION.

Incredible Truth, by Irvin S. Cobb [Cosmopolitan], pictures great history making events as they were recorded by contemporaries who were present.

Prose Quartos [Random House] contains six little first edition volumes by six famous American authors.

Leigh Hunt's "Examiner" Examined, by Edmund Blunden [Harpers], tells of the too outspoken weekly journal which caused the imprisonment of both Leigh Hunt and his brother, John.

The Things That Are Not Caesar's, by Jacques Maritain [Scribners], is an essay on the relation of church and state.

The Ignoramus Garden Book, by Mary Wheeler Rush [Sears], is a practical garden guide for beginners.

British Woman Here to Talk About Chinese

Lady Dorothea Hosie Has Wide Knowledge.

BY ALTA MAY COLEMAN.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Suffrage and "Abie's Irish Rose" were two reasons why Gertrude Linnell wrote her new romantic novel, "The Ghost of the Highway," and why she is having grand tea parties given in her honor such as that at Mrs. Edward S. Mills' recently. Miss Linnell while in her teens made speeches for suffrage.

LADY HOSIE.

"With the independence of women a reality, there is no need to fight the romantic tradition. And now that it no longer exacts penalties, it is being revived for its charm," she said.

Therefore, Miss Linnell finds her name on no book of grim realism, but instead a tale of American adventure in the Balkans with "the women all beautiful and the men all handsome and brave."

Miss Linnell was driven from the stage to her typewriter, she says, when she discovered she had no proper theatrical instinct to guide her. After several seasons of trouping, several long seasons of hoping and praying for a New York engagement, she refused a rôle in the original company of "Abie's Irish Rose," which played on Broadway for years and years and years!

Not only were the literary crowd in evidence at the tea party for Lady Dorothea Hosie on Thursday. There were ornithologists and geographers, orientalists and archeologists, all of whom share with Lady Hosie an interest in China.

Her husband was in the English diplomatic service there, and she lived up, to her name—which in Chinese is "Happy Gardener"—by writing "Two Gentlemen of China" and "A Portrait of a Chinese Lady." The first of these portrays a social life now past. The second pictures the present changed status of women.

Lady Hosie lectures on China, too; she is here for a tour. In appearance she is not unlike Ellen Terry; has English blue eyes and short upper lip. She smiles as she talks, a charming facility.

The affair was held in the modern rooms of the A. W. A. club; the hostess was Dr. Anne Walter Fearn, who was formerly head of a hospital in Shanghai which combined picturesque eastern furnishings with occidental efficiency. Another old friend of Lady Hosie's was present, Princess Der Ling, who was court lady to the famous Dowager Empress. Among the notable guests was Dr. Morton Kahr, recently returned from the jungles of Dutch Guiana to see his new book, "Djuka," through the press.

We saw, too, H. Charles Tomlinson—son of H. M.—who is an artist and also a publisher. He is associated with Walter J. Crysler Jr. in Cheshire House, the new firm specializing in fine printing. He has drawn the illustrations for Samuel Butler's "Erewhon," and for "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" which will be issued under the Cheshire banner this year. He also has illustrated his father's new book, "Out of Soundings," which is brought out by Harper's next week.

"WINDJAMMER" TELLS OF APPRENTICE SEAMAN'S VOYAGE

"Windjammer," by Ken Attiwill [Doubleday-Doran], is not a second "By Way of Cape Horn," although like Villiers' fine sea saga it pictures the voyage of a Finnish square rigger with grain from Australia to Queenstown. Attiwill, like Villiers, was an Australian newspaper man, and his voyage was made the same year Villiers sailed. But there the similarity ends. Villiers wrote of the sea as a seaman. Attiwill merely knew enough of seamanship, learned on this, his first and only voyage as sailor, to make good as an apprentice seaman. He writes well and has a picturesque style, but "Windjammer," while interesting, is unsatisfactory as a book of the sea. Even the foreward by Capt. David Bone of "Brassbounder" fame isn't especially convincing. A. C.

COUNTY ASKS AID OF RELIEF GROUP IN FEEDING POOR

Wants Help Pending Action in Assembly.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

With 25,000 Cook county families to be fed and with appropriations with which to feed them exhausted, a situation yesterday confronted the county board that called for action.

AMELIA SEARS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

On the recommendation of President Anton J. Cermak, at a special meeting to consider the matter, the county commissioners adopted a resolution to appeal to the governor's unemployment relief commission to underwrite the expenses of the emergency relief work pending action by the legislature at Springfield on a bill authorizing the board to issue $2,000,000 in bonds for the work.

Commissioner Amelia Sears and Joseph L. Moss, director of the bureau of public welfare, went from the meeting to lay the proposal before the budget committee of the commission.

Decide Matter Monday.

While no action was immediately forthcoming it was understood that a favorable attitude toward the appeal has been manifest by several members of the commission. Arrangements were made for the committee to meet on Monday with the county board to decide the matter.

Of the $5,000,000 raised by the governor's commission, approximately $2,500,000 has already been expended, Frank Loomis, secretary, stated, although the February expenses are not included in the estimate.

"It's my opinion," Cermak told the commissioners, "that some of you had better go down to Springfield next week and do whatever can be done about this. They say they object because there was no provision made in the bill for a referendum. It's my opinion that this emergency was too grave for it to have been submitted to a referendum.

Something Must Be Done.

"No matter what they say about this bill, something has to be done to keep these families from starving. It's as much the concern of the legislators as it is ours. The bill was submitted in January, which was plenty of time in which to consider it. I'd like to take some moving pictures of these needy families here down to Springfield and show them to those fellows. I'd like to see the lawmaker that would turn down such a deal."

Director Moss of the bureau of public welfare presented a report to the board showing that at one time in 1928 the previous high point of the county relief program was reached when 8,500 families were provided with assistance. Figures for 1931 reveal that 20,000 families were helped during January and that the February total is approximately 25,000.

For the first quarter of the present fiscal year welfare appropriations have reached a total of $720,000, which is $130,000 over the amount expended during the entire year of 1930. During February, Mr. Moss stated, about $344,000 was expended, and March bills, it was estimated, will reach $360,000. This is the sum the governor's commission will be required to underwrite if it accedes to the board's request for aid.

BETTY COMPTON AND DOWLING'S HONEYMOON OVER

New York, March 6.—(AP)—Betty Compton, the dancer, and Edward Dowling, whose secret marriage Feb. 18 was revealed four days later as a big Broadway surprise, spent two days at sea enroute to Havana and their honeymoon was all over but the separation. Today they were back in New York, avoiding questioners.

Arriving in Havana, they chartered a plane for Miami almost immediately to go home and go their separate ways, a fellow passenger said they told him, convinced they could never get along together.

Dowling went to his mother's home and Miss Compton was receiving her mail at the home of her mother.

Dowling was a dialogue writer for a motion picture firm. Miss Compton, whose future is estimated at $250,000, was reported today to be planning a home of her own in Westchester.

Lincoln Park Is Ready to Let $4,000,000 Contracts

H. Otto Weege, superintendent of Lincoln park, yesterday announced that contracts calling for a total expenditure of close to $4,000,000 for sand fill and breakwater materials are to be let soon. This will be the first step in the program to create land in the lake between Montrose and Foster avenues for the extension of the outer drive and for a new bathing beach and recreation area at Montrose avenue.

Traffic Delayed as Fuse Blows Out on Bridge

A delay of six minutes to traffic on Michigan avenue at the link bridge was caused yesterday morning when one of the main control fuses blew out while the leaves were tilted skyward. The bridge lifted at 10:53 a. m. for the passage of the Sandmaster and was lowered, after a new fuse had been put in, at 11:03 a. m., ten minutes later. The average opening period for boats is four minutes.

Identify Holdup Man Slain by Police Squad

The Negro bandit shot and killed early yesterday by a police squad at 46th street and Vincennes avenue was identified later as Nathaniel Johnson of 4709 Evans avenue. Several minutes before the shooting Johnson and two other men, one of whom was caught, held up William Regas, cashier of a restaurant at 360 East 47th street, and took $16.

Ann Gerry, who was to have been witness for defense in case in Felony court brought by marathon dancers against promoter. Judge Padden dismissed the case, telling the complainants to bring civil suit.

Judge Frank M. Padden in the Felony court yesterday ruled that the claim made by four marathon dancers against C. A. Pressey, dance promoter, had no elements of criminality and that the case properly belonged in the civil courts. He dismissed the charge against the promoter and told the dancers that if they thought they had a rightful claim against Pressey for $3,500 they should sue him.

The dancers claim that under their agreement with Pressey they were entitled to a 50 per cent split of the proceeds of a dance, while the promoter contended that the agreement was that the dancers would get 50 per cent of the money for tickets which they could personally sell to their friends. The dancers are Theresa Zito and Jack Ritoff and Marcella Meadows and Bob DeMarchis.

SOUTH PERUVIAN REBELS MAY JOIN NEW ARMY JUNTA

Malcontents Driven Out in North.

LIMA, Peru, March 6.—(AP)—Hope that peace was at hand in Peru, shaken by four revolutions in the last seven months, was expressed by the new junta of Gustavo Jimenez tonight after a sympathetic attitude was shown by the southern military leaders at Arequipa, who revolted last week.

Followers of Lieut. Col. Jimenez, who overthrew the five day old provisional junta headed by Dr. Ricardo Leoncio Elias by a surprise coup d'état last night, conferred with representatives of the northern and southern forces today. While no official announcement was forthcoming of the support of the Arequipa group, a message from them to Jimenez led to the belief the southerners would line up behind the Lima government.

Welcomes Jimenez's Manifesto.

A telegram from Samanez Ocampo, leader of the Arequipa forces, welcomed Jimenez's manifesto promising a speedy return of constitutional government. Ocampo had refused to support the Elias junta, which came into power after a naval ultimatum forced the resignation of Lieut. Col. Luis M. Sanchez Cerro as provisional president Sunday.

Troops of the northern expeditionary force today landed at Pascamayo, which had been occupied by rebel troops belonging to the 11th infantry. The rebels retired when they learned of the approach of the loyalists. The latter proceeded to Guadalupe in search of the rebels, but upon arriving there they received orders to return to Lima.

Veterans Ask Peace.

Veterans of the war of 1879 took a voice in affairs today, saying they could no longer remain silent in the "sad hour which was tending to become dark." They urged the younger generations of the army and navy to abandon their warlike attitude and embrace each other as brothers.

Those signing the veterans' plea were headed by Vice Admiral Melitón Carbajal.

LONDONERS RIOT AS 'SOVIET SLAVE' ATTACKS RUSSIA

Reds Break Up Meeting with Fist Fights.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 6.—A series of riots, a threatened panic, and the exploding of firecrackers over the heads of a huge audience were the big features of a massmeeting in Albert hall tonight, when a so-called "soviet slave" pleaded with British friends of Russia to help stop the terrible conditions in the convict camps of north Russia.

Both men and women joined in the general melée. More than fifty free for all fights broke out among the massed thousands when Lord Brentford, formerly Sir William Joynson-Hicks, rose to speak.

Fists Crash on Jaws.

Cries of "Long live the soviets!" were heard amid the din of fists crashing on jaws, shouts of men and shrieks of women. Chairs were wrecked and disturbers, including several speakers, were thrown out of the hall bodily by the perspiring "bobbies."

In the midst of the wild scene, lighted fireworks were hurled from the gallery onto the struggling mass below. As soon as the first batch of communists were dragged from the hall, another group took up the offensive and the riot was waged anew.

Call "Soviet Slave" Liar.

Lord Brentford finally was forced to sit down, after he stated that the cruelties under the czar were nothing compared to barbarities in Russia today. Winston Churchill also found it impossible to make himself heard amid shouts of derision. Communists continually jumped to their feet only to be pounced upon and dragged downstairs.

The "soviet slave," who escaped from Archangel with two other prisoners, was billed as the attraction of the massmeeting, called by the Great Trades Defense union as a protest against the "soviet economic war." He told of the appalling conditions in the Russian timber camps.

His words were drowned out by shouts of "Liar!" from various parts of the house.

Eventually, and during a moment of silence after most of the disturbers had been removed outside, a resolution of protest against the "soviet economic war" was passed. While the national anthem was being sung, another group of communists attempted to drown out the chorus by attempting to sing "The Red Flag."

Sir Hilton Young recently presented the "soviet slave's" sworn statement regarding Russian labor conditions to Prime Minister MacDonald.

YOUTH HELD TO GRAND JURY.

James Reid, 21 years old, 429 East Forty-fifth street, colored, was held to the grand jury in bonds totaling $45,000 by Judge Frank M. Padden when he was arraigned in the Felony court yesterday on three charges of robbery.

RUSSIA DEMANDS DEATH OF 5 ON TRIAL FOR PLOT

MOSCOW, March 6.—(AP)—Death sentences were asked by the prosecutor tonight for five of the fourteen members of the Menshevik [Social Democratic] party being tried for plotting to overthrow the soviet government. N. B. Krylenko, the prosecutor, delivered a six-hour speech before the court.

He requested a maximum punishment of ten years for five of the others, who are accused of conspiring to end the present régime by sabotage and by outside intervention. He requested the court define the sentence for the remaining four at less than ten years imprisonment.

The five whom the prosecutor seeks to place before a firing squad are Vladimir Groman, a noted economist; Abraham Ginsburg, a member of the supreme council of national economy; Nicholas Sukhanov, Michael Yakubovich, former assistant chief of supplies section of the trade commissariat, and Vasily Shar, manager of the state bank.

GANDHI WARNS BRITAIN TO EASE STRINGS ON INDIA

Wants Government Seat in Delhi, Not London.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW DELHI, India, March 6.—While the jails continued to pour out their thousands of rather disillusioned young men and women, and the princes of India, the commoners, and the British expressed satisfaction at the advent of peace, it became more apparent today that yesterday's settlement was only a provisional one, that India stands more than ever for responsible self-government in the very immediate future, and that, if it does not get it, Mahatma Gandhi will go on the warpath again.

THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent had a long and frank talk today with the "holy man," in which he answered questions definitely and concisely. The Nationalist leader left no doubt as to how much he and his powerful All-India congress organization are concerned over the next round table conference, as well as the aim to have India handed over to the Indians with but a shadow of safeguards which the British government stipulated at the London conference.

Wants Right to Secede.

At the same time Gandhi said that he was perfectly willing to reconcile "complete independence" with the remaining parts of the British empire, provided India becomes an equal partner with the right to secede from the empire when it wished.

"My idea of self-government does not exclude association within the empire when it is of mutual benefit to both parties," he said. "But the right to secede certainly should be ours and I shall press for it at the coming conference.

"Complete independence may mean separation. But if we remain Delhi would become the center of India, instead of Downing street. I admit that popular imagination cannot conceive the British rising to this height. The British have said that they love liberty for themselves and for others, but they have the faculty for self-delusion no other nation has."

Asks Minority Safeguards.

Gandhi was pressed to define his attitude on the question of safeguards which he will take to the coming conference.

Q.—You are willing to accept some safeguards, aren't you? A.—Certainly, but not the present ones. The position of the All-India congress, as far as safeguards is concerned, is well known now and it is up to Great Britain, knowing our position, to invite congress to participate in the conference.

Q.—What safeguards would you accept? A.—Minority safeguards, for one thing. That is a legitimate safeguard. I should also admit safeguards in the matter of finance. So much of our public debt as falls to our lot would have to be secured and to that extent I would be bound to entertain safeguards for the country's credit and its consequent expansion.

Would Pay for Army.

Q.—What about the army? A.—As far as the army is concerned, I cannot think of any safeguard except that we should guarantee the pay and fulfillment of any other conditions in respect to British officers and soldiers whose services may be necessary in India.

Q.—What about the repudiation of debt? A.—I would not repudiate one single farthing that can be legitimately credited to us. The All-India congress never sought to repudiate a single rupee of the national debt. What it has insisted on is justice in obligations that might be imposed upon an incoming government. The matter of apportionment of the public debt should be referred to an independent arbitration tribunal.

Will Not Relax Boycott.

Q.—Would the league of nations satisfy you? A.—It might, but we do not know whether England would agree. I am willing to accept any tribunal agreed to by both of us.

Q.—Will you press this matter at the coming conference? A.—Yes!

Due to a misunderstanding about the continuation of the boycott on foreign cloth, which is regarded as a death blow to textile mills in Manchester, England, Gandhi insisted he wanted to make his position clear.

"The boycott will not be relaxed, as it is not a political weapon," he explained. "It is indispensable for our national existence."

Q.—Do you expect to achieve a settlement of the Hindu-Moslem question before the conference? A.—I hope to, and if I don't it is not much use holding the conference. There is no enmity between the masses of the Hindus and Moslems. It is only between their leaders.

Gandhi said that he expected the first part of the conference would be held in India, with a final windup in London.

Q.—Will you take part in it? A.—I would think so.

Gandhi departs on Sunday for his home at Ahmadadab, but he will not return to Assam because he vowed last year that he would not do so until self-government had been won. He admitted that he hoped to return there before he died.

Will Tour "No Tax" District.

The "holy man" will tour the Sorath district where peasants engaged in a no tax campaign. He will then go to Bombay, which is the center of the movement, returning to Delhi to confer with the government on March 18. He will also visit Karachi, where he must keep his young bloods from repudiating him in the national convention of the all-India congress, which convenes there March 25.

The special ordinances which were issued to combat the revolution were withdrawn at 6 o'clock tonight, and many publications, including Gandhi's Young India, are expected to reappear in the next week.

COL. WINSHIP NAMED JUDGE ADVOCATE OF ARMY, MAJOR GENERAL

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—The appointment of Col. Blanton Winship to the post of judge advocate general of the army with a rank of major general was announced today by the war department. Col. Winship succeeds Maj. Gen. E. A. Kreger, who retired Feb. 26 because of physical disability.

[(C.) Harris & Ewing Photo.]

Four other promotions in high army ranks were announced today. Brig. Gen. Albert J. Bowley was elevated to the rank vacated by Maj. Gen. George Leroy Irwin, who died last week, and Brig. Gen. Robert E. Callan was promoted to the rank of Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, former chief of staff, who retires by operation of law on March 31, 1931. Col. John F. Madden and Col. Howard L. Laubach were raised to the ranks vacated by Generals Bowley and Callan.

The new judge advocate general of the army has had a military career dating from 1898. He was at one time judge advocate of the department of the lakes with headquarters at Chicago, and played a prominent part in the court martial of William L. Mitchell in 1925. He hold the Montenegrin medal for valor and the distinguished service cross for heroism in France during the world war.

NEXT CONGRESS SEEN AS FRIEND OF NAVY BY HALE

London Pact Program to Be Ready.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—A complete program for building the American navy up to the maximum tonnages permitted by the London treaty will be submitted to the next congress by the navy department, Chairman Frederick Hale [Rep., Me.] of the senate naval affairs committee announced today. At the same time he predicted that a majority of Republicans and Democrats in the Seventy-second congress, which convenes in December, would favor adoption of a bill authorizing the navy department's new program.

SENATOR FREDERICK HALE.

Congressional approval of such a program as suggested by Chairman Hale would involve expenditure on new ships of between half a billion and a billion dollars during the next ten years. According to official naval figures, the cost of building the fleet up to London treaty strength, and replacing vessels which would become obsolete over the next ten years, would exceed one billion dollars.

Short 300,000 Tons.

The United States fleet today is depicted as weak in cruiser, destroyer, submarine, and aircraft carrier strength. Not counting battleships, replacement of which may begin in 1937, the United States would be short approximately 300,000 tons of warships in 1937 if no further authorizations and appropriations for new warships were voted by congress.

"At the next session," Chairman Hale said, "the navy department will submit to congress a complete plan for bringing our navy up to treaty strength. With a long session of congress before us and no possibility of stopping legislation by dilatory tactics, I am firmly of the opinion that such a program can be adopted. I fully believe that we shall have as much Democratic as Republican support for our program."

Inspect Three Power Treaty.

Secretary of State Stimson said today that a thorough study would be made of the British-Italian-French naval accord before a reply was sent to London. Experts of the navy department have been asked to look over the figures to see if this country is adversely affected in any way.

TWO OLD BEN MINES CLOSE AS MEN MAKE DEMANDS ON COMPANY

Benton, Ill., March 6.—[Special.]—Two more Old Ben mines were idle today as a result of demands miners are making upon the company for a division of time among all the six mines owned by the company.

Mines No. 14 at Buckner and No. 8 at West Frankfort were the ones affected today. Several hundred pickets gathered at these two mines today and demanded that operations cease. The No. 8 and No. 14 miners returned to their homes without giving the pickets room for violence, although it is said several guns were flashed.

Miners of the No. 15 met at West Frankfort this afternoon and voted to continue work. The Buckner shaft has been working steady for several months and it is said the men do not wish to cause the company trouble. Pickets are reported to have come largely from Johnston City where picketing was started several weeks ago when the company contemplated closing the mine. Other pickets came from West Frankfort, Benton and Coello.

The Johnston City men have carried their grievance to all of the operating mines of the Old Ben company and it probably will result in the closing of all these properties and making idle 4,000 men. Plans went forward late today to picket No. 15 mine tomorrow in case it attempts to work.

German Minority Plans to Boycott Polish Senate

BERLIN, March 6.—(AP)—Dispatches from Warsaw today said the three members of the German minority in the Polish senate had announced they would not participate in further sessions in protest against the government's attitude toward the German minority.

2,494 PRUSSIAN POLITICAL RIOTS RECORDED IN YEAR

And No Relief Is Seen by Police in Future.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 6.—Citizens of Germany, though well aware of the fact that hardly a day passes that the police are not called to restore order at some political encounter or other, were nevertheless taken somewhat aback to read that 2,494 political disturbances required the personal attention of the cops in the last year.

And that is only in the state of Prussia. Figures for the rest of Germany are not yet available. Statistics given out by the Prussian state minister of the interior to the landtag [state legislature] tell the story of why the policeman's life is not a happy one.

Fascist Versus Reds.

The extremist parties in both directions—National Socialists [Fascists] and communists—furnished most of the fun. The actual number of meetings disturbed or broken up, according to the minister, was 521 for the "Nazis" and 1,873 for the communists. Other groups who "also ran" in the great catcall and clash sweepstakes were the republic defending Reichsbanner organization, 49 instances, and the Stahlhelm, 33.

Along another line—that is, the meetings which required or suffered police interference—it is revealed that the communists were most often the victims. They received police attention 1,258 times; the "Nazis," 955 times, and the Reichsbanner, 173 times.

Thousand Weapons Seized.

The late summer months, August and September, renowned for frequent meteor flights, were also the periods of most frequent political fights. In shakedowns and searches, the police garnered a harvest of more than a thousand firearms and dangerous weapons.

Between the "Shupo" [Schutzpolizei] and the Landjaeger groups, defenders of Prussian peace and order had to make use of their weapons at least 436 times. The Berlin police, using their weapons more than a hundred times, totaled fatal results on 14 occasions.

Figures begin to get really big when it comes to the count of political meetings in general, at which the police stood guard, whether they interfered or not.

24,000 Open Air Meetings.

In the course of the year, there were a few less than 24,000 open air meetings, at which 384,000 policemen were on duty. This counts the cops over again for each separate time they were on duty. Indoor meetings numbered 258,874. Nearly 260,000 police were required to keep an eye on them.

All in all, the Prussian police had things hot and heavy for them during the last twelve months. And at the present rate, there is not likely to be much lightening of the load—least of all, in the direction of the "Nazi" meetings and activities.

DENY 3D DEGREE POLICE TACTICS WITH SCHROEDER

Indianapolis, Ind., March 6.—(AP)—Testimony that Harold Herbert Schroeder, charged with the murder and burning of an unidentified hitch-hiker, was not subjected to "third degree" methods was given at the trial here this afternoon.

Clarence Golder, an Indianapolis police sergeant, testified that Judson L. Stark, former prosecuting attorney, had told Schroeder he need not make any statement if he did not care to.

Golder said Sheriff George L. Winkler had offered to take Schroeder into Illinois, 35 miles west of Terre Haute, where Schroeder said his car went into the ditch, killing the hitch-hiker, so that he could show them the spot. Golder said they started on the trip, but Schroeder changed his mind and said he did not care to go.

Golder said the defendant was asked why he had written to his wife, if he did not kill the man, asking her to give the body a decent burial. Schroeder replied that he thought he owed it to the hitch-hiker "to give him a decent burial in the event his wife got any insurance."

Dr. Charles Humes and Dr. E. Roger Smith, alienists appointed by the court, announced they had completed their study of Schroeder. They will testify after all state and defense testimony has been completed. A technical plea of insanity has been filed in Schroeder's behalf.

FORMER BANKER ARRESTED.

Paris, Ill., March 6.—(AP)—George F. Patterson, cashier of the defunct First National bank at Milford, Ill., was arrested by a deputy United States marshal today, charged with falsifying records to conceal $14,366.11.

$400,000 MORE IN LOANS PAID TO WAR VETERANS

An additional $400,000 in bonus loan checks was mailed yesterday to veterans in Chicago and Illinois by the veterans' bureau at Hines. This amount brings the total so far paid to approximately $1,500,000. New machinery installed at the Hines bureau has made it possible to keep abreast of the applications filed in the various branch bureaus serving the veterans, officials of the organization stated yesterday. Approximately 60,000 applications have been filed.

PROHIBITION IN POLITICAL CONFUSION.

Mr. Raskob, who has a $600,000 hen on the Democratic party, gave its national committee an idea at the party program meeting in Washington. It was for another amendment to the constitution, qualifying the eighteenth and permitting the states to adopt their own liquor control policy if they wanted to get out from under federal prohibition. States which did not want this freedom could remain under Volstead. Sharpshooters came out of the southern brakes and brush to pot the idea as soon as the chairman had submitted it.

The doctrine of state rights has a history of inconsistencies not confined to any one section of the country. When people want their rights they want them. When they do not want the other fellow to have them their feeling is quite as intense. In this instance the south turns tail on the doctrine of its devotion and Joe Robinson of Arkansas is not satisfied that his state might have what it wanted. Al Smith's state must have it also, whether it wants it or not.

It is an awkward predicament of American politics that a fundamental question in government goes begging for the party alignment which it should have. It concerns the order and purposes of society and government. It relates to the primary theory of both and asks to be taken out of drift and be put under direction. The people are divided on the question, but the parties are divided within themselves.

The split is geographical, economic and religious and everything but what it should be, political. It runs through the parties and not between them. It would be natural for the southern Democrats to declare that they would not have the interference of the federal government in the habits of their citizens and that such control as was used would be exercised by each state. Apparently they prefer to violate federal law rather than rely upon their own and to evade, conciliate or prevent federal enforcement rather than deal with their own. They satisfy their religious principles by voting appropriations for enforcement in New York and Illinois and discard their political principles for this purpose.

Northern Democrats are now the state rights men. Northern Republicans in the industrial states join them in that. The Republican rural units, particularly west of the Mississippi, are hand in hand with the southern Democrats, who in another cause of liberty tried to make these western states slave territory. The worst political feature of the situation is its incoherence. Dwight Morrow and John Raskob, although in opposing parties, seem to join in one in common just as Joseph Robinson and Simeon Fess in another. Fess and Morrow pull different ways in the Republican party, Raskob and Robinson in the Democratic.

The constitutional questions involved are as important as any which separated Federalists from Jeffersonian Republicans, but they have not found their political form.

INTERNATIONAL GOLDEN GLOVES.

The Golden Gloves boxing tournament, which THE TRIBUNE has promoted, grows bigger and better. It now goes international with the French acceptance of an invitation to send French amateurs to Chicago in May to compete in eight classes with the winners of the New York-Chicago bouts in March. The international feature is to stick. Next year another nation will be invited to enter its boxers against the American boys, and for the World's Fair in 1933 fighters from many countries will be invited to the greatest of all international amateur matches.

The American survivors of the Madison Square Garden fights of March 20 will be the Golden Gloves champions of 1931 and will represent top-notch talent among American amateurs. The French take brilliantly to the gloves, as their professionals have shown from time to time. The French selections will be worthy opponents for the boys they will meet here in the Stadium in May, and the promise is for as interesting an international sporting event as ever was held.

These are new hands across the sea, but not in kid gloves. Everybody will know what this international meeting is getting at and will be gratified to have the best men get it.

BRIDGE OPENINGS.

The citizens' police committee, after a painstaking study of traffic control in Chicago, has come to the conclusion that the closed hours for bridges over the Chicago river should be extended considerably. At present the regulations of the war department require that the bridges be opened during busy hours of the day for any sort of craft that comes along. When a brief extension of the closed hours was granted recently Chicagoans were asked to believe that a huge favor was being done them.

No one objects to the reasonable use of the river by lake going vessels. It is not the large ships, but the petty harbor craft, which are the source of irritation. A dredge or pile driver will frequently tie up traffic for blocks on both sides of the bridges, causing as much inconvenience as the passage of a couple of hundred thousand bushels of grain.

The evidence indicates that the political pull of the dredging companies is held in greater esteem at Washington than the rights and interests of the people of Chicago.

THE PERVERSITY OF THE TRAVELING PUBLIC.

Some railroad managers still seem puzzled by the steady decline in passenger traffic. The fact that travelers, in increasing numbers, prefer automobiles to trains is regarded as an instance of perversity not to be explained on rational grounds. The trains continue to run with substantially the same schedules and equipment they have always had, and if people no longer will ride in them the people are plainly at fault.

Some of the railroads think the trouble lies in the cost of travel. They have therefore reduced their fares in the hope of regaining some of the lost business and no doubt will fill more of the red plush benches even though they lose money on every passenger. What many railroad managers do not realize is that the red plush benches themselves are really the cause of the trouble.

The 1931 automobile is a more comfortable car, either for rider or driver, than the 1930 car. It is vastly superior to the car of 1920 and it is so different from the car of 1901 that the two can hardly be compared. There has been no such progress in the designing of railroad coaches. There have been improvements, to be sure, but, for the most part, a coach put in service in 1931 offers few comforts to the traveler which he could not find in a coach of 1901. The railroad managers are asking their prospective patrons to abandon 1931 automobiles in favor of 1901 railroad carriages drawn by locomotives which are scarcely better than the locomotives of 1891 from the viewpoint of the passenger. The newer engines are more powerful and economical, to be sure, but the trains run little faster, and they are still noisy and cinder-laden.

The railroad starts with an advantage. It has a clear track, which should invite speed, and the passenger can get up and walk around if he feels like it. The railroad car is large enough to permit the designing of comfortable seats with ample leg room and leave plenty of space for the accommodation of baggage. These advantages exist, for the most part, only on paper. The automobiles on the country roads commonly leave the trains behind, and increasing numbers of travelers regard the automobile ride as much less irksome.

A PHILOSOPHER GOES, ONE RETURNS.

As Dr. Einstein departed, Dr. Voliva arrived. The coincidence was noted by the ship news reporters. The American came in on a flat world and the German set out on a spherical one, each confidently, which proves the intrepidity of the human soul. Dr. Voliva's sun is set nearly by at the top of a covering disk. In a debate with Dr. Einstein he could submit to a comparison of bank balances, realty and chattels to prove which was the most persuasive and plausible theory, his or the other doctor's. Dr. Einstein has said that only a few, barely including himself, can understand him. Dr. Voliva is understood by a whole community of solvent citizens.

The philosopher of the Illinois Zion could not get anywhere with or on a round world. That would leave him flat. When he comes in off a flat one he is worth meeting at the dock, which proves to the home folk that a prophet is returning to them. Thus he rates a reverent reception and a band. Let others do as much with other cosmic material.

Nevertheless Dr. Einstein was received in America with almost as much acclaim as Charlie Chaplin has been in England, to which he returned as a home town boy. This may prove that Americans are more scholarly than the English or less humorous or that both get their fun looking at lions. Mr. Chaplin can walk in Chicago without interfering with the traffic or having to dive into protecting doorways. Dr. Einstein can do the same in Berlin. It is hard to tell what makes a lion a lion. Dr. Einstein is among those puzzled, good naturedly. What he never expected was fan mail.

ADVERTISEMENTS OF WEAKNESS.

Censorship is an advertisement of weakness far more effective in destroying social morale than the things censored usually can be. It comes of fear and fear comes from lack of confidence and stability. Spain is lifting censorship on foreign press telegrams. Italy is now the only western nation that keeps the lid down tight.

When the press, speech and public assembly are restricted there is danger, and the danger usually is less from the enemies of the government than from its own inner failure and disruption. "No government resorts to censorship," says Count Romanones, foreign minister of Spain and a Liberal leader, "unless it sees no other road. The country cannot be considered as living normally as long as there is press censorship." By degrees the Spanish censorship will be lifted, and only by those degrees will Spain return to normal, stable life.

From the great war and the rebellion thereafter western Europe and the United States have a heritage of censorship that breaks down with difficulty. The damage of it is long-lived. Recovery is slow.

Editorial of the Day

RATIONAL CHARACTERS IN FICTION.
[Cedar Rapids Gazette.]

The London production of O'Neill's "Strange Interlude," with its undercurrent of thought revealed in asides, has given new impetus to that ancient device, and now an English author has produced a novel using double columns to set forth simultaneously the thoughts of two persons.

"I offer my book," he says, "as a serious contribution to the art of fiction. Many experiences which seem to be mutual are not really so. A kiss, for instance, may affect a man and a woman very differently."

This thought revelation fad has its good points. It will make it necessary for authors to create characters capable of thinking. That should add to the interest of at least one-half our modern fiction.

SUSPICION!

Suspicion is sometimes a dreadful, wretched thing. We are warned against harboring dark, suspicious thoughts. And yet, sometimes a sinister suspicion is verified. Take the case of State Trooper Posten, who a day or two ago was driving along in his auto in Pennsylvania looking for crime. He saw a gentleman named R. S. Sapp driving ahead of him. "Ah ha," said State Trooper Posten as he watched Mr. Sapp zigzagging back and forth, "I have a suspicion he is drunk."

So State Trooper Posten, cherishing this sinister suspicion, stepped on the gas and trailed along close behind Mr. Sapp.

Mr. Sapp charged through a garage, burst out the far end, and collided with a car passing in the road back there. State Trooper Posten was so close behind that his car ran into Mr. Sapp's machine just as it collided with the machine in the road and all three cars went into the ditch together.

And as they pulled State Trooper Posten out of the wreckage and brought him to by hurling a bucket of water in his face he feebly murmured, "He was."

So, after all, suspicions are never entirely unjustified.

SILVER FINGERS.

You would be startled did you know
That in your dreamless sleep
The moon comes in the window,
Slowly, softly, shadow-creep,
'Cross the silken counterpane
Lightly touching, ghost afloat,
Stooping low with deft precision,
Silver dagger at your throat!

You would be startled did you know
My thoughts are moonbeams in the night
That seek your window, enter in
To search, to touch with silver light
Your sleep-sweet smile, your tumbled hair,
To muse while slowly making note
How best with silver fingers
To caress your silver throat!

COLORADO PETE.

JIM COX in his speech before the Democratic national committee meeting in Washington soothed the wets and drys, north and south, east and west, and everybody by this pronouncement: "Let us patch up our differences on prohibition and consider the problem on a united front." Before you do that, Mr. Cox, suppose you take a half bucket of oil and a half bucket of water and try to mix the two. After that pick out a nice little fat ewe lamb and put it in bed with a roaring and somewhat hungry lion, making them sleep quietly and sweetly together. And after you have looked at your bucket of oil and water and seen whether they mixed or not and whether the lamb is sleeping by the side of the lion or inside of him—why, then, you can make another speech about patching up the differences on prohibition and considering the problem on a united front.

AND, ANYHOW, even if the jury in Kansas City finds that a lady can shoot her husband for trumping the ace, or whatever he did wrong in that bridge game, it won't settle the real question, Can you shoot and get away with it if the husband or wife, as the case may be, eats crackers in bed?

FAME AND US AMERICANS.

The one hundredth anniversary of Gen. Phil Sheridan was celebrated all over this great land yesterday. And why? Because he was a great soldier, a great cavalry commander, one of the foremost figures of the civil war? No, but because at the battle of Cedar Creek when his troops were pounced down on by the rebels Gen. Sheridan was not with his troops, where he belonged, but twenty miles away. If he had been on the job he would never have been heard of; no poems, no statues, nothing. But he was twenty miles away and made a spectacular ride, and as Americans always fall for anything spectacular, he became a national hero, and his hundredth birthday is wildly acclaimed.

MORAL: KEEP TWENTY MILES AWAY FROM YOUR JOB. BUY A HORSE.

THERE WAS A PICTURE in our w. k. contemporary, The Trib, yesterday, which intrigued us mightily. It was of the prince of Wales, Edward David, standing with his brother George in front of a grand old-fashioned saloon bar in Santiago, Chile. And on the grand old saloon bar were things which might have been highballs, cocktails, and 'alf and 'alf. When we were a small child we yearned to be a bareback rider in the circus. Now—ah, now—we would fain be the prince of Wales! Or brother George!

IT'S THE CLIMATE, MY DEAR!

Old Bob Becker says the bluebird and robin are due any day now. And we heard a bluebird swaying in the top of a blooming cherry tree yesterday call to a robin eating the little green apples on an apple tree (it would be an apple tree) and say: "Did you see what Bob Becker, what calls himself a hunting expert, says in The Trib this a. m. about us soon comin' back? Why, the poor simp, we've never been away." And the robin said: "Helino, not this winter. And it's been so warm ever since Christmas I've been thinkin' about movin' up to the north pole, but my wife likes Chicago, and you know how women are!" And then the bluebird and the robin sought the deep shade of an old oak, for it was near noon, and the heat in this latitude in March is sometimes quite intense. Ah, what a climate! What a climate!

Lagniappe.

PROPHET VOLIVA of Zion City comes back from a trip around the world still insisting it is flat. Stop, Harold, do not laugh. Mr. Legge, just resigned from the farm board, says we must produce less foodstuff to be prosperous, and the U. S. A. is inaugurating work on the Hoover dam so that hundreds of thousands of acres of desert land can be made to bring forth greater and greater quantities of foodstuff. Maybe the darn thing is flat after all.

SHALL WE EAT RAW FISH?

DR. H. B. WARD presents evidence of the increasing prevalence of broad tapeworm among the people of the United States and Canada. This threatens to become the predominating human parasite worm within a generation or two unless steps be taken to control it.

Many years ago an occasional case was reported, sometimes from the north and sometimes from the south, but always in some one who had but recently come from Europe. Just about the beginning of this century this worm appears to have established a stronghold in northern Michigan and in Minnesota, generally in the vicinity of Lake Superior. There is evidence now that it is pretty well established in the upper Mississippi valley, east of the Rocky mountains and west of the Alleghenies and around Lake Superior, well into Canada, mostly to the westward. However, it is capable of spreading almost anywhere in North America, since it is spread by the fish of lakes and rivers, and the temperature of the water is not important.

The best measure of control is for every one, collectively and individually, to refrain from eating raw and undercooked fresh water fish. Salted fresh water fish are capable of spreading it unless well cooked. The disease is quite prevalent among cooks because of the habit many cooks have of tasting fish during the act of cooking it.

The life cycle of the parasite is as follows: The infected person or animal voids the worm eggs. These get into sewage and reach fresh water, or else they are carried there by shore wash. Infected dogs and other animals, including bears, are largely responsible for pollinating the streams. In the fresh water lakes and streams the eggs hatch and the larvae are taken up by cyclops, a part of fresh water plankton. The larva develops in this small animal until animal and larva are eaten by fish.

The fish which are most apt to become infected are pike, pickerel, and perch. Man, bear, and other animals catch these fish and eat them. If the infected fish is well cooked the meat can be eaten with safety. However, great racial and nationality groups are accustomed to eating fish either raw or underdone.

TREATING INGROWN NAILS.

Mrs. R. P. writes: I have had an ingrown toe nail on my right foot for the last few years. Can you describe a cure for it?

REPLY.

Ingrowing toenails result from wearing narrow toed shoes. The shoe pushes the front end of the nail until it comes to lie somewhat diagonally on the toe.

Lift the ingrowing corner by means of pledgets of cotton. In the course of time you can lift the corner of the nail above the level of the flesh. When this is accomplished the inflammation gets well. Wear broad toed shoes. In some cases operation may be necessary.

TREATING KNOCK-KNEES.

M. B. B. writes: My 2½ year old girl is noticeably knock-kneed. Are there corrective shoes made to improve this condition and if so, where may they be found?

REPLY.

I doubt if wearing any shoes would cure knock-knees if the deformity is considerable. Operation is much more promising, but the treatment is not simple. Nor is it brief. Would it be possible to have an orthopedist examine the child and determine whether shoes would help?

Since rickets is the probable cause, make use of light, open air, and cod liver oil or viosterol.

CRAMPS IN THE LEG.

S. E. W. writes: I used to have cramps in my left leg so acutely that I was obliged to get the foot on the cold floor for relief. I used a heavy wool stocking fitting well over the knee and since then I have hardly had a twinge of cramp and have worn it for about two months.

REPLY.

Keeping the legs warm is the best single preventive of leg cramps occurring at night. In an occasional case other treatment is required.

WHY DO ANYTHING?

R. S. Jr. writes: I am constipated, but otherwise well. However, if I punch my abdomen it feels sore. My bowels move at night. I eat yeast. What should I do?

REPLY.

Why do anything? There seems to be nothing wrong with you. Why punch your abdomen so hard, or why punch it at all?

CIVIL SERVICE PLUMBER.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—[Friend of the People.]—Would you let me know what means are necessary to have one's name entered for civil service commission examination?

I am a licensed plumber and belong to a union. C. O'K.

At present no examination is scheduled for the position of plumber. We have, however, placed the name of this inquirer on our mailing list for notification of the next examination called.

JAMES S. OSBORNE, Secretary.
Civil Service Commission.

DEALING WITH MINORS.

Chicago, March 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A husband is behind for several months of rent and is unable to pay, due to the fact that he is out of work. 1. If the landlord obtains a judgment, can he levy against any of the wife's assets? 2. The wife is employed. Could he garnish her salary, or what other action could he take?

Have been informed that under an Illinois law a wife is responsible for the above rent.

I went through bankruptcy, but as yet have not obtained my discharge. My brother, who is 15 years of age, wants to open up a small business, amounting to about $500, with money that he saved by working. I am to help him with this business.

3. Could my former creditors attach my brother's business?

4. If they did, what recourse would I have?

5. Is my brother legally of age to conduct a business or have a banking account of his own?

1 and 2. Yes, assuming that the rent covers premises that the family is occupying and, hence, is a family expense.

3. No.

4. Employ an attorney.

5. Because of his minority he is in a position to repudiate business contracts. Hence it would be unwise for other persons to deal with him, but there is no law against his dealing with persons who are willing to deal with him.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NATIVE CITIZENS.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—[Friend of the People.]—Do children who were born of foreign parents in the United States become citizens at birth? J. DEF.

Yes. The constitution of the United States provides that all persons born in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens.

FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT,
District Director of Naturalization.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 7, 1915.

LONDON.—Wireless reports state that the big Holland-America steamship Rotterdam has reached the side of the French liner La Touraine, which has been afire in the Atlantic 400 miles west of Ireland since early yesterday. The message says the Rotterdam is prepared to give every assistance, including transfer of the passengers if necessary. The message ended grave anxiety in London. There are 280 persons aboard the La Touraine and it carried more than 80 tons of cartridges which were being taken to the allies from America. It was feared these might be reached by the fire and explode, blowing up the ship.

LONDON.—The combined activity by the allies in the Dardanelles was overshadowed by the official announcement that a British squadron of battleships and cruisers under command of Vice Admiral Sir Richard Pierse had begun the bombardment of the fortifications at Smyrna. For two hours a continuous rain of shells was poured in on the stronghold from long distance. Then after considerable damage had been done to the fort, the squadron came to closer quarters and continued the fire.

ATHENS.—The Greek cabinet resigned in a body following a conference regarding the possible entrance of Greece into the war. It was announced this action was taken because King Constantine flatly refused to approve the program of entering the conflict advocated by Premier Venizelos.

PETROGRAD.—The Austrian army of the Archduke Joseph Ferdinand has suffered a severe defeat in the fighting around Stanislau, in East Galicia, the war office claims.

CHICAGO.—Ignazzion Meccia, a member of the firm of Meccia & Manno, Italian bankers at 515 West Oak street, ended his life by shooting on his wife's grave in Mount Carmel cemetery. Grief over her death a year ago is believed to have been the cause.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 7, 1901.

CHICAGO.—Harry Trend of London, England, committed suicide by jumping into the river from the Clark street bridge. George E. Beban, an actor, who was passing by, jumped in after Trend, and was nearly drowned in a vain attempt to save the young Englishman's life.

CHICAGO.—Police Chief Kipley has made the discovery that gambling exists in Chicago. A few days ago, before the grand jury, he testified that gambling was dead. But he has seen a great white light. Aroused by the exposures of the policy and slot machine evils made by THE TRIBUNE, the chief issued orders to his commanding officers to suppress all forms of gambling in their districts.

WASHINGTON.—President McKinley sent to the senate the name of Robert S. McCormick of Chicago to become minister of the United States to the kingdom of Austria-Hungary. Mr. McCormick succeeds Minister Harris. The appointment probably will be confirmed without delay. This is the first of the European posts to be given to Illinois.

LONDON.—Private information received in London confirms the rumors of peace negotiations between Lord Kitchener, Sir Alfred Milner, and Gen. Louis Botha, Boer commander in chief.

MANILA.—It is reported that negotiations are in progress for the surrender of all insurgents on the island of Cebu. Judge Taft, president of the Philippine commission, has conveyed to President McKinley his assurance of an early settlement of the strife in the islands.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 7, 1881.

WASHINGTON.—Illinois has two candidates for commissioner of pensions under the Garfield administration. They are Gen. James Martin, formerly member of congress from the southern part of the state, and Jesse H. Moore, an ex-member of congress from the Bloomington district. Already the scrambling politicians are making the life of the new President miserable with their hunting for jobs. President Garfield attended worship at the Christian church, accompanied by his mother, his wife, his children, and their governess.

WASHINGTON.—The appointment of Senator Kirkwood of Iowa to be secretary of the interior has caused a great deal of interest here as to his successor. The appointment of Kirkwood to the cabinet places Gov. Gear of Iowa in an embarrassing position, because he has been a candidate for Kirkwood's place. As the legislature does not meet until next winter, Gov. Gear must appoint some one else, and those most prominently mentioned are ex-Senator Harlan and James F. Wilson.

NEW YORK.—L. B. Boomer of Chicago, one of the most celebrated bridge builders in the country and late president of the American Bridge company, died suddenly at the Windsor hotel, in the sixty-first year of his age.

LONDON.—President Garfield's inaugural address was telegraphed here verbatim and produced an excellent impression, English and Americans alike admiring its scholarly style and wise moderation of tone.

CHICAGO.—The funeral of Stanton A. Irish, prominent lumberman, who died on March 3, took place from Plymouth Congregational church, Michigan avenue near 26th street. A large number of the city's business leaders attended.

ANOTHER RIP

MAIN STREET.

Janesville, Wis., March 3.—Chicago isn't at all like other big cities. Not at all like even medium size cities.

Walking up Randolph street, between La Salle and State, always results in my feeling perfectly at home. I was born, reared and am now raising a family of my own, in a little hick suburb of Janesville, Wis. We have our own little general store with the customary hot blast coal stove in the center, around which we gather on cold days and during inclement weather and swap yarns.

Now, Randolph street reminds me so much of our own little corner back home. Canvas banners and streamers all over just like a county fair, stretched right across the street from one building to another; just like the banners back home that are swung between the blacksmith's shop and the postoffice announcing our fair. Or, like the banners shown across the street between the general store and Bill Schuman's paint shop, announcing the coming of the circus to some nearby town.

The only thing that's missing to make me feel absolutely at home is hitching posts. MARVIN AVERY.

PINS AND BUTTONS.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—I agree with your correspondent that the oriental has a superior intelligence particularly when he so easily fools a man into sending laundry to him simply because he "inserts no pins and buttons no buttons." The same gentleman will no doubt stop buying new shirts, inasmuch as they are both pinned and buttoned.

It is indeed unfortunate that there are no American laundries in this gentleman's neighborhood that can comply with his request. I trust that he has investigated all American laundries in his vicinity. F. M. HOWARD.

ENVELOPES FOR SHIRTS.

Chicago, March 2.—I wish to say as a laundry employé that my concern has used shirt envelopes for years, which does away with the necessity of pinning shirts. As for buttons, we have three girls and some expensive sewing machines entirely for the purpose of seeing that these buttons are sewed on every shirt. It isn't fair to judge all laundries by what one laundry does.

BLANCHE A. GIBBS.

RESPONSIBILITY.

Riverside, Ill., March 4.—Youth is irresponsible, they say, and how can it be otherwise when every one—preachers, lawyers, writers, and the public in general—say to them, "Run along and do anything you think of, and if you commit a crime you are not responsible. It is the fault of whisky, the saloon, your great-grandfather, the war, bad company, prohibition gin, or society in general!" In my short life of fifty years I have seen each of these things rise in public favor as an excuse for crime.

When, O when, will we tell the boys and girls the truth? When will we say to them, "You are responsible for your own acts. You will have to answer for them"?

Shall we continue to make youths more irresponsible by relieving them of all responsibility, or shall we strengthen their moral backbones by letting them carry their share of responsibility on their own shoulders? N. V. PHILLIPS.

ITTY-BITTY.

La Crosse, Wis., March 3.—Why do some parents insist on talking baby talk to their children long after the baby stage is past? I know an adorable little chap whose parents and grandparents have talked baby talk to him so much that now, at the age of 7 years, he seems mentally deficient, although he is perfectly normal. He actually seems surprised if we speak correctly to him. His smaller brothers and sisters are being brought up in the same way. To me it is a shame. He has been going to school for two years and that even hasn't helped him. X.

ON GOOD BOOZE.

Chicago, March 3.—Long before prohibition, in my own home town, there was an occurrence similar to the Kirkland case, and the five men involved [two of them minors] were drunk on what the wets lovingly refer to as "good" liquor. It is strange but true that many who boast of taking sporting chances in defying laws and conventions are anything but good sports when it comes to "paying the piper"; they are champion alibi artists.

A READER.

WHEAT.

Chicago, March 3.—I am much interested in Mr. Dyer's letter taking issue with THE TRIBUNE'S statement that "members of the Board of Trade buy grain," and asserting it should have stated that they sell grain, "because in 1930 they sold 2,000 times as much grain as the farmers raised."

Accuracy would seem to require the frank statement that the amount bought and sold is identical and for the most part represents purchases or sales made by members of the board on orders from customers.

The interesting feature is the failure to understand that speculative buying and selling, as such, serves the important function of providing an open market for both buyers and sellers at all times. To serve that purpose the volume must be many times the volume of grain in existence, just as bank clearances must exceed the country's gold reserve or the volume of water in the river exceed the cubic feet of lumber it will float.

Whatever the volume of future trading during 1930, it has been too small to float the grain produced, and if grain is to be distributed without cost to either producer or consumer, and if it is to be distributed at prices that are economically healthy, the volume of speculation must reach something near that which prevailed prior to the farm board. For, if the farmers' experience under the farm board has demonstrated anything, it is that reducing the volume of trade in open markets makes distribution of grain at a fair price utterly impossible.

The price of oranges, which Mr. Dyer mentions, is not brought about by cooperative marketing, but by a large increase in the volume of oranges consumed, due to an intensive advertising campaign. While the consumption of wheat in America has declined, the consumption of oranges has been multiplied many times, and the demand for some commodities always has, and always will, determine the price at which they can be sold.

There is still a large enough volume of speculative buying and selling on the Chicago Board of Trade so that grain, alone, among things produced on the farm, is bought and sold without distributive cost to any one.

I extend to Mr. Dyer an invitation to spend a day with me on the Board of Trade at his convenience, after which I am sure he will understand why it is that a farmer secures a larger percentage of the price the consumer pays for his grain than of any other commodity he produces. W. W. STOUT.

CONGRESS.

Chicago, March 4.—The session of congress just expired reminds me of the old commentary on the mountain laboring and producing the mouse. Even the pro-administration newspapers cannot help but criticise the relatively minute accomplishments of the national legislative body, contrasting its accomplishments to the great threshing about and wordy hugger-mugger that has accompanied the recent session.

The evident vote catching maneuver of the passage of the increased laws on veterans' compensated insurance certainly makes one wonder what type of mental timber sits in the national capitol. It is evident that the welfare of the nation assumes a vastly different appearance to the mental giants of congress than it does to the nation's executive officers who are responsible for the money that flows to and from the national treasury.

Personally, I favor a 30 day session of congress about every six years.

COOLIDGE'S GREATNESS.

Elgin, Ill., Feb. 26.—Harry Morlan wants to know why America respects ex-President Coolidge for his greatness. He is honored chiefly for two supreme qualities: the faculty of keeping his hands off and the ability to hold his tongue. Some day we shall cease to look upon a President as a potential Santa Claus, but accept him for what he is, the pilot of the ship. The pilot's job is to look ahead and hold the vessel to her course. That's what Calvin Coolidge did. DAVID ELLIS.

PRIVATE WATCHMEN.

LET INDUSTRIES RETAIN PLANTS IN WAR—BARUCH

Then Let Soldiers Fight, He Tells Commission.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—"Nobody with any familiarity with industry," Barney M. Baruch, head of the wartime war industries board, told the war policies commission today, "could seriously urge a wholesale assumption by any federal bureau of the responsibility for management of any or all of the vast congeries of manufacturing establishments upon which we must rely for extraordinary effort in event of war.

"Even if such bureau management could prove adequate to the task—which it could never do—the mere process of change would destroy efficiency at the outset. The industrial pattern of the United States . . . is a cohesive, living organism and the injection of arbitrary and artificial interference could be attempted only at the risk of starting a sequence of upheavals, the ends of which no man can foresee.

No Way to Win, He Says.

"To approach it, on the advent of war, bearing in one hand demands for a vast stepping up of output and a heavy draft on its man power, and in the other a broadaxe of governmental confiscation with which to wreck its vitals, is no way to win a war."

To the commission, of which Secretary of War Hurley is chairman, he outlined his program for a central government agency which would organize industry and deal with it "as practically a single unitary system instead of a highly competitive community."

Cannot "Draft Dollars."

But he emphasized as corollary theories these things: That dollars cannot be drafted, no labor conscripted; that the function of the military arm is fighting, not factory running; that a central industrial authority should be essentially civil in character, with the military branch in the rôle of one of the competitors for the supply of resources and materials.

Representative McSwain [Dem., S. C.], member of the commission, inquired whether Mr. Baruch thought the railroads would again have to be taken over.

"I believe they should have their own administration under the control of the central agency," Mr. Baruch replied. "In other words, they would be treated like any other industry."

Confiscation "Absurd."

He called the confiscation of wealth "absurd." To "draft dollars," he said, would send the dollars into baking powder cans and these into the ground; such a plan was "crazy."

What he would do he described in detail in a 43 page pamphlet.

He advocated statutes to give the President, whenever congress shall declare war or a state of national emergency, the right to fix all prices, rates, rents, wages, and commissions as of a certain date, these to be subject to subsequent adjustment; to give the President power to determine what industries should operate under a license, and power to determine what customers should have a priority of right to supplies.

Outlines Organization Plan.

He advocated the setting up of a peacetime organization after the fashion of that set up in the war department by the national defense act, a skeleton "with individuals in the diagram, each individual with a younger man to sit with him," which should hold meetings every two years or so, at which the program could be discussed, and, if necessary, revised.

20,000 SOLDIERS MUTINY IN CHINA; WRECK RAILROAD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEIPING, March 6.—Twenty thousand troops have mutinied at Sinyang, 180 miles north of Hankow, and have joined communist bandit forces, according to reports received here. The mutineers tore up tracks on the Peiping-Hankow railroad and traffic has been suspended.

It is declared that the mutineering troops are seizing railway property and revenues as they proceed. The soldiers were under the command of Gen. Tuang Ying. Some fighting has been reported.

Military authorities at Hankow are sending eight trainloads of troops to Sinyang to crush the mutiny. In other portions of central China, as well as south of the Yangtze river, communists are causing great worry to the Nanking government by their tactics in attempting to influence loyal troops to join them.

KING AMANULLAH SEEKS TO REGAIN AFGHAN THRONE

Says Present Ruler Is "Treacherous."

PESHAWAR, India, March 6.—(AP)—Amanullah, former king of Afghanistan, hopes to return to the country from whose throne he was driven to abdicate in 1929, he says in a long letter from his refuge in Rome to the local newspaper Zamindar. The missive was published today.

He declares the present emir, Nadir Kahn, has flouted all his promises to Afghans and has impeded the nation's progress by his reactionary methods.

"I fervently pray," Amanullah wrote, "that I may be taken back to my sacred land so that, according to my cherished hopes, I may devote the remainder of my life to the uplift of my nation. I admit my mistakes, but I was not the tool of anybody. My reign meant peace and progress, and if Afghanistan so wills it it will see such days again.

Says He Loves His People.

"The people's desire for my return has rekindled a new love for them in me. That is why Mohammed Nadir has been forced to launch a propaganda campaign against me."

Describing King Nadir as his "treacherous general" who gained the throne by a secret cabal and prevented the nation from electing its own representatives to the national assembly, Amanullah continues:

"The nation's real representatives do not look down on me. I may have made some mistakes, but it can never be said I was guilty of criminal misappropriation of the nation's trust. They know I sacrificed myself in their service."

Denies Wife Is Christian.

Amanullah denied that his wife, the former Queen Souriya, has been converted from Mohammedanism to Christianity, as was reported, or that he took $35,000,000 from the state treasury when he left Afghanistan.

As to allegations that he consumed wine lavishly during his rule, the former emir remarks that the export and import of liquors in Afghanistan was totally stopped during his rule.

"Has anybody been punished for bootlegging under the present regime?" he asks.

At a banquet in London three years ago the former emir sipped orangeade and spurned rare wines.

SLEUTHS HIRED TO AID POLICE IN GORDON SLAYING

Worldwide Angles Seen in Noose Killing.

New York, March 6.—(AP)—Private detectives were at work today on the murder of noose-slain Vivian Gordon as New York's police department, with 18,000 of the "finest" at its command, knocked in vain at a "wall of silence."

It was Charles B. McLaughlin, district attorney of the Bronx, who disclosed the employment of a national detective agency, a step almost unprecedented in the long history of unsolved killings here.

The private detectives have been authorized to proceed "regardless of cost," and to concentrate on what were called the "world-wide ramifications" of the slaying of the henna haired demi-mondaine and blackmailer, who had been seeking evidence to back her charge that a policeman and her former husband "framed" her on a vice charge eight years ago.

Scores of Leads Fail.

Dozens of witneses have been questioned and scores of leads followed since her body was tossed into a Bronx park eight nights ago, but "no headway of any great importance" has been made, McLaughlin said today. He explained he was paying the detectives out of his own pocket, but expected to get his money back.

Private detectives have been employed in many crimes in the past, notably jewel robberies, but police could recall no outstanding murder case in which they were used.

Although McLaughlin said the detectives had been at work since the body was found, Police Commissioner Mulrooney said he knew nothing about it.

Diaries May Prove Aid.

The voluminous diaries of the slain woman, who had contacts with the half-world and the realm of finance, were believed to contain names of persons in Canada, Europe, and distant parts of the United States. The private detective agency has a far flung organization suited to running down distant clews, McLaughlin said.

One of the first tasks is to discover the meaning of a mysterious entry referring to money paid out by Miss Gordon to a "bank in Oslo, Norway."

Meanwhile the grand jury continued digging out of the woman's past a strange admixture of racketeers and playboys, mother love and fear of murder, and such names as Arnold Rothstein, gambler who "got his," and the bullnecked Vannie Higgins.

MOVIE GIRL WHO VAMPED SOLDIER FREED AS A SPY

Convinces Austrian Court She Was 'Rehearsing.'

VIENNA, March 6.—(AP)—A beautiful young Czecho-Slovakian film actress, Louise Halwax, was acquitted today of trying to spy out Austrian military secrets. She convinced a court her suspicious actions were merely practice for the rôle of a vampire spy which she hoped some day to play.

The world was a stage to her, she testified in her secret trial. She said she fell in love with Franz Brandner, a young cadet at a military college. Dramatizing her love affair, she pretended she was an international spy and asked him questions she admitted were indiscreet.

Swallows Broken Glass.

Cadet Brandner became frightened at the apparent attempts of the comely actress to obtain military information and reported her actions to his superiors. They had Miss Halwax arrested on charges of trying to obtain military secrets for a foreign power.

In prison awaiting trial the actress became hysterical at the turn her harmless hoax had taken. She threw her dishes at the guards and three weeks ago she swallowed broken glass in an attempted suicide. During her two day trial she was given frequent hypodermic injections to deaden the pains resulting from her suicidal effort. Yesterday, when she found her trial set for room 13, she threatened to jump out of the window and got it moved to room 12.

Talked Too Much, Judge Says.

Acquitting her today, the judge said the actress had brought her troubles on herself by her suspicious actions, but declared she was obviously innocent of the grave charges.

"You merely liked to talk too much," he said, "and had a too lively imagination."

SEIZE TWO WHO MADE BOMBS FOR MACHADO FOES

HAVANA, March 6.—(AP)—Police today thought they were on the verge of a solution to the recent series of bombings which have marked political disturbances in Cuba.

Last night they arrested two men, who led them to a cave near the River Almendares. There they found a quantity of dynamite, other material used in the manufacture of bombs, and a few completed bombs. The men, it was said, told police they had accepted orders for 120 bombs, but had completed only a few when their work was interrupted. The explosives were to have been delivered to forces opposing President Machado. One of them, the prisoners said, was to have been used against Mayor Gonzalez of Matanzas.

Police said the prisoners, Andrew Niebla and Luis Mutiz, were involved in the bombing of a Havana water main last January which injured four persons and interrupted the water supply.

PARIS, March 6.—(AP)—Several suburbs of Paris were under water tonight and with the Seine river still rising conditions were more precarious than in the disastrous floods of last December. Water covered the streets of Corbeil, Viry-Chatillon, Villeneuve, and St. Georges. A light snow fell throughout the day.

RADIO EXAMINER FIGHTS RENEWAL OF KTNT PERMIT

Asks Board Bar Cancer Institute Station.

Washington, D. C., March 6.—(AP)—Ellis A. Yost, chief examiner of the federal radio commission, today recommended that the application of KTNT, Muscatine, Ia., for renewal of license be denied.

The station, which is operated by Norman Baker, had applied for renewal of license, which had been extended from Jan. 31 pending decision by the commission. The action of the examiner is not final and must be passed upon by the commission.

"In the broadcasting of station KTNT public interest, convenience and necessity have been made a mere adjunct to the personal business of the licensee," Yost said.

Norman Baker, operator of station KTNT, Yost said, was engaged in a number of business enterprises for which the station was an advertising medium. He said the Baker institute, founded for the treatment of cancer, was advertised in Baker's talks over the station and patients were permitted to give testimonials over the station.

"The American Medical association, having disagreed with Baker's theories and practices in connection with the Baker institute," Yost said, "became the subject of venomous broadcast attacks by Baker from station KTNT, the association being referred to as an 'amateur meat cutters' association' and 'medical trust,' and members without exception were held up to the public as being 'unscrupulous, immoral, inefficient, money mad malpractitioners.'"

Dr. J. F. Runnels, Physician for 50 Years, Dead at 80

Dr. John F. Runnels, 80 years old, a practicing physician for 50 years, died yesterday in his home at 845 Webster avenue. He was formerly on the examining board for policemen and firemen, and also once served as medical examiner for the school board. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Emma L. Runnels, and a sister, Mrs. Eliza Beghtel. Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at the chapel at 2221 Lincoln avenue, with burial in Graceland cemetery.

MOSCOW, March 6.—(AP)—R. Bagatsky, a locomotive engineer held responsible for a railroad wreck in eastern Siberia, today was sentenced to be shot and twelve members of his train crew were sent to prison for three to ten years. Government investigators contended that this and similar incidents in the past year were the result of sabotage.

ADVERTISING IS ON THE INCREASE, HODGES ASSERTS

New York, March 6.—(AP)—Gilbert T. Hodges, of the executive board of the New York Sun, on his return today from a national tour in the interests of organized advertising reported to the directors of the Advertising Federation of America that advertising volume is on the increase.

"Advertisers in all lines of business," said Mr. Hodges, who is president of the federation, "realize that fearless, aggressive efforts are necessary if they are to benefit from the great potential market now existing in this country.

"The average wide-awake executive is fully cognizant of the fact that a vast majority of the salaried and wage earning classes in this country have suffered little or no reduction in their earnings, but that spending among these classes has been greatly reduced.

"This great army of consumers is wearing out clothes, becoming tired of the old radio and the worn-out car, and now its members are in the right mood for spending upon the proper urge from aggressive business leaders."

WYOMING VOTE ON DRY LAW IN '32 IS APPROVED

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 6.—(AP)—Wyoming voters in November, 1932, will express their opinion of the federal prohibition law. Acting Governor A. C. Clark today signed a resolution of the legislature authorizing an expression of opinion on the eighteenth amendment.

"This state is a unit in representative government," Acting Governor Clark said, in explaining his action.

The resolution will permit the voters to say yes or no to the question: "Do you favor repeal of the eighteenth amendment?"

CATCH BANDITS IN FLORIDA SWAMP IN WILD CHASE

Milton, Fla., March 6.—(AP)—A trail of banditry and terrorism that spread over 400 miles from the east coast of Florida to a swamp in the northwestern tip of the state ended here tonight at the Santa Rosa county jail with two men and two women locked in cells.

They were captured in the swamp near here today by a posse of two hundred men, many of whom had been trailing them since they started shooting their way westward from Jacksonville Wednesday night.

The men gave their names as Tex Hayes and Bert Oglesby. The women were registered as Mabel Wertz and Fay Harris.

Chief Deputy Sheriff W. H. Cobb of this county, who led the posse, said that when they came upon the quartet in the swamp where they had tracked them from their abandoned automobile.

At Jacksonville Wednesday night a policeman was shot and another clubbed when they halted the bandit car to question the occupants.

The four headed west after the shooting. At Wellborn, Fla., they kidnaped a garageman and his son and took their machine.

Near Chipley they encountered a posse when they forced a convict gang and the guards to lie down while they stopped a passing motorist and seized his machine. In the exchange of shots with the possemen a citizen and a deputy were shot. They turned southward here and entered the swamp where they were captured.

$100,000 Blaze at Peoria; $75,000 Fire at Danville

Peoria, Ill., March 6.—(AP)—Fire tonight destroyed the 3 story Brady bottling works and an adjacent warehouse and threatened to sweep an entire block of wholesale houses before it was extinguished. Damage was $100,000.

Starts in Drug Store.

Danville, Ill., March 6. — (AP) — Fire starting in the basement of the Plaster drug store tonight caused $75,000 damage to it and neighboring stores.

OPEN VERDICT IN SHOOTING.

A coroner's jury investigating the fatal shooting of Paul Huxley, 40 years old, 1357 North La Salle street, found in his bedroom on Thursday night, yesterday was unable to decide whether the shooting was suicidal or accidental. An open verdict was returned.

MARYLAND'S SENATE BOOMS GOV. RITCHIE FOR THE PRESIDENCY

Annapolis, Md., March 6.—[Special.]—A resolution endorsing Gov. Albert C. Ritchie for the Democratic nomination for President was approved today by the state senate, and almost immediately the governor's record became a matter of state politics.

Galen L. Tait, chairman of the Republican state central committee, issued a statement in which he declared that "Mr. Ritchie's own cherished reorganized administration in Maryland is a flagrant example of that overcentralization in government from which he diverts attention by alleging its existence in the federal government."

The vote in the senate was 12 to 1.

Fought for Hungary in War of '48; Dead at 104

BUDAPEST, March 6.—(AP)—Heinrich Link, said to be the last Jewish survivor of the legions that fought for Huggarian freedom in 1848, died suddenly here today at the age of 104. He was said never to have been ill a day in his life and up to four years ago conducted a clothing business. He left four sons, twenty-one grandchildren, nine great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild.

Doris Blake Advises Girls Affairs of Heart and Home

THE SIXTH JOURNEY

BY ALICE GRANT ROSMAN

SYNOPSIS.

John Falconer, a successful architect, returning home to England from Cape Town, meets Hilary Revel, author of travel books, on shipboard. During the journey home their acquaintance grows into a friendship neither wishes to end.

John tells Hilary of his daughter, Judith, born of a café singer while he was a widower. His wife, John said, had magnanimously adopted the child. His sister, Gertrude, took charge of Judith when his wife died. Hilary suspects such magnanimity.

Hilary had taken her war invalided brother, Hugh, away from home ten years ago to give her younger sister, Christine, and brother, Steven, a better chance. Now that Hugh was dead Hilary was returning home. Hilary is not met when the boat docks and John takes her to her door. Hilary's stepfather, the only sympathetic member of her family, tells her that Hugh left her his possessions in trust, to be settled on her at her marriage, or to buy her an annuity at the age of 40, if still single.

INSTALLMENT XII.

A PROPOSAL.

In the darkness Hilary smiled. Disrespect? Hugh was beyond any such meaningless phrase, after all; it could not trouble him. If he had been killed outright he would have remained a kind of hero to them all, but they could not realize the far greater and more terrible heroism he had needed to live like that. By taking him away she had robbed him of their understanding; in a sense he had been dead to them for years, but she was not sorry that she had done it—no longer for Christine's sake and Steven's, but for Hugh's, Hugh who had always minded so dreadfully that any one should see his pain. His eyes had seen so much—nature's way perhaps of balancing his incapacity—and he seemed nearer than he had ever been.

She was none of the things they thought her, neither a martyr nor a woman of mark and fortune; she was a girl, in spirit if not in years, returning alone to a world that had become strange.

All I possess in trust for my sister, Hilary Revel, to be settled on her at her marriage, or, if she remains single, to buy her an annuity at the age of forty years.

Hugh had advised her to marry, and tomorrow she was going to meet John Falconer, and, she remembered in a flash, that it had been from a talk of him that the argument with her brother had come about. Ridiculous, of course, Hugh could not have foreseen that she would ever meet John Falconer, but all her common sense could not defeat an undertone of pleasure in the unity of it. When Destiny is kind, who will refuse to see her hand?

She would meet John for luncheon. Her step-father's talk of selfishness had given her the excuse, but she knew that she needed nothing of the kind, and would have gone without it. His care of her all day, his complete effacement of his own problems and his own dreary homecoming, were as dear as his need of her.

"Homecoming is a state of mind."

Her intention to go out occasioned no surprise, for they all had their own plans and preoccupations. Hilary, after being tied for years, had looked upon the voyage home as an irresponsible interlude between one portion of her life and another, and was amused at her own misconception. She was as free as air. The knowledge charmed her.

Christine, who, if she was not living her own life, certainly seemed to be leading no one else's, came down to breakfast already dressed to go out, but hearing Hilary's movements, offered:

"If you mean to shop I might put off my engagements and come, too. I'm rather keen on that sort of thing."

"You can't, this morning," said Hilary firmly, "I am meeting a friend for lunch."

"O, all right, if two's company," said the younger girl with calm. "Bill, you know, you will be wanting some new clothes——"

The heavy luggage had not yet come. Hilary, glad of the hint, stopped her taxi in Knightsbridge and, with a sense of adventure, bought a new hat. Feeling dissatisfied with her dark suit, she decided to get a light scarf to match the hat, and told the driver to take her to Regent street, with a faint thrill at this remembrance of familiar places.

She was caught up into enchantment by remembered names above shop windows, by the red buses pacing in serried lines before her taxi and behind, looking strangely like trams that had run loose by mistake; by the majestic beauty of gray buildings against the summer sky; by ridiculous inconsequential things, such as a cat washing its whiskers beside a policeman on point duty, and then deciding to cross the road and holding the traffic up while it accomplished the journey at its lordly ease.

Bond street, with its little shops, was as aloof as of old; she was glad it had not changed; but Regent street had a new and portly air, like a very stout matron in too many jewels. Hilary, having bought and put on a rakish scarf and many colors, turned her back disdainfully upon the matron and drove off to Prince's to meet John.

He had been waiting for her and came out eagerly as the taxi drew up, paying it off and silencing her protests.

"I should have come for you if I'd had the pluck," he said.

"I shall be popular with your firm," declared Hilary happily. "I can't imagine how you escaped their clutches as it is."

"O, hang the firm. . . . Here's our table, and now tell me how things are and what it was like to get home."

"Heavenly."

Falconer looked a little daunted and yet relieved.

"That's good. You didn't find it strange then?"

"Strange isn't the word. It was positively ridiculous. Nothing is what I expected, but then it never is, and I can't imagine why I was naïve enough to suppose it would be. All my values were completely wrong, and the people who used to come first are now last, and the things that seemed to matter don't. Do you wonder I am excited?"

Smiling at her, he said:

"Well, I am grateful to whoever comes first for sparing you this morning, anyway."

"O, he was not there," she replied, "in the sense you mean, and nobody else minded. They didn't come to meet me yesterday because they supposed I would go to a hotel. I am just a mildly interesting visitor, and they are rather wondering where to put me."

"Good God! And that is your idea of a heavenly homecoming?" he exclaimed with indignation.

"Homecoming is a state of mind."

"It's no good. I knew perfectly well when I rang you up last night something was wrong."

"Only because my voice wabbled. I had been crying, you idiot. Now, having extracted that disgraceful feminine confession, you might shed a few tears of remorse yourself."

"The poor little soul, it's a damned shame!"

"Don't look so concerned," said the girl in a gentle voice. "I'm not poor and it's not a shame. I haven't cried for years and it did me good. Women, for some mysterious reason, are like that, I believe. You see—all the way home, in fact, ever since Hugh died, I have not let myself think of him. I thought it would be simply a sentimental hugging of my chains; and now I know I was a fool and can think of him naturally, and be glad he's dead for his own sake and yet miss him, too. . . . But please let us stop this discussion of me, and tell me your news instead," she added hastily, aware that she had been talking to him as she would have talked to nobody else. "I hope they welcomed you with open arms and played the conquering hero?"

Not that I noticed. Every one was very civil and I suppose my sister was glad to see me. I had an hour or two there yesterday afternoon."

"I'm glad you managed to do that. Did you see Judith?"

There was something so normal and spontaneous in the question that Falconer, touched beyond words, found all his careful resolutions melting away. He answered it with another:

"You know I love you, Hilary. Will you marry me?" he said.

GOOD MORNING!

If your taste runs to Madame X-y melodramas with courtroom scenes—here's another one.

As in "Madame X," "Common Clay," and photoplays of that ilk, the heroine is more to be pitied than censured, and "a man was the cause of it all."

The story picks up its red-headed heroine when she is 17 and marries her to a handsome and wealthy playboy, by whom she has a child. Her husband's unfaithfulness sours Millie on marriage and she leaves him, resigning her 3 year old daughter to the care of his loving and aristocratic mother, who, she feels, will provide Connie with greater advantages than can she herself. Then Millie starts forth to make her own way in the world.

Through with marriage, but not with men, the years and dissipation take their toll. But mother love continues to burn hotly in the heart of the drifting Millie and——

Comes the night when she discovers her 16 year old daughter alone in a hunting lodge with a man who had unsuccessfully pursued herself for years. Well—to be brief—

A shot rang out upon the air,
And finished Jim—beyond repair.

Now Millie is a murderess and must stand trial. Will she tell the judge and jury WHY she killed Mr. Jimmie Damier and WHO was the other woman with him at the time the gun went off? No, Millie will not. . . . You're good at guessing, so figure out what happens. It won't be hard.

You may like Helen Twelvetrees as Millie. I found her rather wearing; could quite understand her husband's impatience and failed to sense the allure she was supposed to have for other men. To me she did not age convincingly. Draggled hair and a rather dirty looking makeup do, of course, change her appearance.

Lilyan Tashman and Joan Blondell, as a pair of gold diggers—the first hardboiled, the second a dumbdora—liven up the production considerably. You are grateful to them. John Halliday as Jim is splendid as a suave man about town. Other male rôles are satisfactorily handled. Direction is so-so.

The story is episodic and patently built up. You are singularly dry-eyed and unmoved throughout its delineation. Somehow, you don't believe the 'art of what happens to Millie—and care a little less than that.

See you tomorrow.

"Hell Week" Modified by New U. of Michigan Rule

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 6.—[Special.]—Rough initiations during "hell week" at the University of Michigan must stop. So the judiciary committee of the interfraternity council decreed today. Fraternities that do not obey the spirit of this ruling will be disciplined. The committee ruled that "hell week" must be free of activities involving physical ill treatment of pledges, destruction of property, or interruption of class attendance.

Cardinal Hayes Talks to Texas Senators; His Speech Applauded

Austin, Tex., March 6.—[Special.]—Cardinal Hayes of New York made an address here today in the state senate chamber upon the unanimous invitation of the Texas legislature.

Cardinal Hayes, calling attention to the unusual nature of the occasion, expressed deep appreciation. He considered the invitation "pregnant with benediction, with inspiration to this entire country."

He spoke of the tremendous responsibility which rests upon the lawmakers of the states and urged them to base their legislation upon the best and most expert of human opinions, especially in view of the current economic depression; to be ever mindful of charity, the love of fellow men.

The audience that filled the hall applauded for several minutes after he had concluded with his appeal that God's blessing come down "upon this great commonwealth of Texas."

If You're Deaf, Givers of Jobs Seem Deaf, Too

Proofreader Tells His Troubles to Sally.

It's hard enough for a deaf mute to find employment in normal times, but it seems almost out of the question with jobs as scarce as they have been this winter. So A. L., an experienced proof reader, brought his troubles to Sally Joy Brown at THE TRIBUNE.

A. L. doesn't mind so much for himself being out of work, he told Miss Brown, but he does mind tremendously on account of his wife, also a deaf mute, and their baby. A. L. is only 30 years old, but he has gone a long way overcoming his physical handicap by getting a good education and training in his profession. He has plenty of A1 references for a proof reading job, but he is willing for the sake of his family to take a job as a janitor in an apartment building in exchange for a furnished apartment and a small salary.

Another appeal reached Miss Brown yesterday from D. J. J., who was laid off last Aug. 1 as a clerk in the accounting department of a sleeping car company.

"My telephone has been disconnected and now my electric light and gas are to be shut off any day and I am threatened with eviction from my flat," he wrote. "I am at the end of my rope. I am 33 years old, married, and have two children, 9 and 7 years old. I have had a high school education, 14 years of general office experience, and am a world war veteran, but will not receive the bonus, as I was in the service only 45 days. I am willing to accept any kind of a position of any nature, day or night, that I am able to do. I can furnish satisfactory business and personal references."

Among the jobs offered yesterday by thoughtful Chicagoans were two positions as delivery boys at $16 a week by F., Inc., a men's clothing company.

The S. company, 1700 West Austin avenue, called for a girl to do factory work at $14 a week.

Dr. N. S., on East 59th street, needed an experienced draftsman and will pay 75 cents an hour.

Mrs. C. G., 4400 block, North Harding avenue, called for a paperhanger and calciminer. Mrs. R., 1400 block, East 69th street, wanted a painter and calciminer.

The H. P. company on East Ohio street had a temporary job for a stenographer at $4 a day.

All job offers will be welcomed by the Sally Joy Brown department, Superior 0100, and the Illinois Free Employment service, 116 North Dearborn street, where the jobs are distributed.

Old River Shipping Concern Strikes Hard on Bankruptcy Bar

Cincinnati, O., March 6.—(AP)—Over a century old, its history filled with glamorous inland river lore, the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet company, one of the largest transportation concerns operating on the Mississippi and its tributaries, went into bankruptcy late today.

John W. Hubbard, president of the line, listed debts of $182,804.08 and assets of $250,205.99 of which $250,083.43 was in packets and wharfboats and only $22.56 in cash. Hubbard said the company was unable to meet the debts and would surrender all its property to creditors.

Among the assets was the steamer City of Cincinnati, valued at $197,933.70, a "modern palatial inland water craft."

Reminiscent of the days of hoop skirts, flowered vests, mint juleps, top hats and carpet bags, the packet line once was among the most favored and prosperous of river shipping systems. In recent years it barely managed to break even in receipts.

German Museum Expert Finds Chicago Beautiful

With a beautiful skyline and other distinctive attributes Chicago is gaining increased recognition throughout the world as an art center, according to Prof. Herman Voss, curator of the state art galleries of the Kaiser Friedrich museum of Berlin.

He is staying at the Bismarck hotel and will remain in Chicago for three weeks to explore what he described as this "wonder of modern cities."

Dr. Voss admitted he was warned to beware of machine guns when he departed for Chicago. Instead, he said, he found a metropolis of gigantic vitality, of beauty. He was amazed, he declared, at the marvelous skyline. Chicago, he remarked, should be proud of its art influence.

350 BUSINESS MEN SEEK $1,000 EACH TO AID DROUGHT VICTIMS

A group of 350 business men started their work as a "flying squad" for the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross yesterday, each having pledged himself to raise $1,000 for drought relief sufferers.

The decision to use that method to raise the remainder of the Chicago quota followed a meeting at which John Gilchrist, vice president of the Commonwealth Edison company, presided in the absence of Samuel Insull. The committee reported that $290,000 is needed to complete the Chicago quota of $940,000, a part of the $10,000,000 national fund being raised for drought relief in twenty-one states.

It was announced at the meeting that contributions during the last week have greatly fallen off. This news was greeted with the consent of each man present to raise $1,000. Less than an hour later the first thousand was reported.

Among those attending the meeting were Gen. Abel Davis, who made the appeal; Howard W. Fenton and Melvin A. Traylor, vice chairmen of President Hoover's committee to raise Chicago's quota. Samuel Insull is chairman. James B. Forgan Jr., chairman of the Chicago chapter, is treasurer of the fund committee, and James T. Nicholson, manager of the local Red Cross, is secretary.

Miss Herma Clark, author of the "Dear Julia" letters appearing in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, will give an illustrated lecture on old Chicago at a meeting of the South Side Art association tomorrow afternoon at the Fairfax hotel.

JACKIE COOGAN ASKS COURT O. K. ON $7,500 WEEKLY SALARY PACT

Los Angeles, Cal., March 6.—(AP)—Jackie Coogan, who began his screen career with Charles Chaplin in "The Kid," and is now 16, today sought court approval of a contract with Paramount studios under which he will receive $7,500 a week.

JACKIE COOGAN.

With Jackie was Mitzi Green, 10, another juvenile player, who asked Superior Judge Marshall F. McComb to make official her contract with Paramount for a salary which will increase from $625 to $1,250 weekly. The two have appeared together in talkies based on Mark Twain stories.

Schools, Made to Fit Boys, Curb Truancy

Also Reduce Work of the Juvenile Court.

Mischievous youth who frequently finds it easier to "play hookey" than go to school no longer is branded with a court record when he yields too often to that impulse.

Instead of being turned over to the authorities for a trip to the Juvenile court, the wayward boy nowadays is transferred to a special school. There, under the watchful eye of doctor, teacher, and psychologist, the cause for mischief making is discovered and corrected.

Miss Isabella Dolton, assistant superintendent in charge of the special schools, explained the functions of the new system in a speech last night before the Chicago Woman's club. Previously, she said, where there were one to two hundred boys on the waiting list of the Juvenile court, now there is no such list.

Chicago now has two special schools, Miss Dolton said, the Montefiore at 461 North Sangamon street, and the Moseley, at 24th and Michigan. Truants and incorrigibles, the modern "Peck's bad boys," instead of going to court are sent to those schools. They find themselves with a group where misbehavior is no novelty, so they have to obtain recognition some other way. As a result, Miss Dolton pointed out, 312 boys who formerly were classed as truants, did not have an unexcused absence last year; 61 others were present every day, and the average attendance for the year was 87.35 per cent.

Four reasons have been found for maladjustment in the case of virtually every one of the wayward youths, Mrs. Dolton said: low mentality, uneven development, poor environment, physical disorder.

With the assistance of the doctors, psychologists, nurses, and dentists, the defects of the youths are found and dealt with as individual cases.

As a consequence, Miss Dolton said, the average improvement last year in reading was 126 per cent; in spelling, 101 per cent, and in arithmetic, 167 per cent. One hundred and fifty-nine boys were graduated from the 8th grade with a feeling of success, rather than with a feeling of failure that would have been natural under the blemish of a court experience.

Hutchins Predicts Benefits from New U. of C. Plan

President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago outlined benefits to be derived from the new reorganization of the university to 1,000 alumni last night at the second annual assembly in the Stevens hotel. He told of the prospect of more efficiency in expenditures, of higher salary levels for the faculty, of an even higher quality in the staff than can be maintained now and of the greater opportunities for research work and for the individual student. And then he asked a question:

"Can the American student stand the amount of freedom which the University of Chicago proposes to give him?"

The question remained unanswered. He proceeded to talk of other matters—the new home for junior faculty members bought by the university, at 5742 Drexel boulevard, the expenditure of $10,133,000 last year by the university, the increased faculty salaries in this year's budget.

Boyhood Friends Meet and One Calls for Sheriff

Hollywood, Cal., March 6.—(AP)—Lewis Milestone, director of "Two Arabian Knights," "New York Nights," and other motion pictures, was guarded by sheriff's deputies today following receipt of letters threatening his life.

Milestone said the letters were from a man he had known in boyhood in Russia.

After a separation of fourteen years they met here recently and the former friend demanded large sums of money and threatened him with "Russian justice," he said. Postal inspectors were searching for the man.

14 YEARS OF SERVICE AND ACHIEVEMENT

Practically every outstanding picture, every important stage and screen star, every popular musical organization that has appeared in Chicago in the past 14 years, was presented in a Publix Balaban & Katz Theater.

This is a record of achievement no theater or theater organization in the world can equal.

This very week our theaters are presenting, in addition to the choicest pictures of the season, the most distinguished stage attractions in the world—

BEN BERNIE and his Orchestra.....at the CHICAGO
GILDA GRAY in Person.....at the ORIENTAL
AARONSON'S COMMANDERS.....at the UPTOWN
DUKE ELLINGTON and his Band...at the PARADISE
10 FAMOUS RADIO STARS.....at the TIVOLI

Publix Balaban & Katz theaters are as far ahead in achievement today as they were when we built them.

It has always been, and it will continue to be, our policy to give Chicago theatergoers a full measure for their money, even to overflowing, in pictures and in stage entertainment.

Mild Climates Beckon Society as Easter Nears

BY THALIA

An Easter vacation in a clime where spring comes in like a lamb is the most alluring prospect in many a Chicago household right now.

Parents who have boys and girls away at school are planning spring holidays to refresh the students before their return to the last two months of school and final exams. Some of the debutantes, too, are going away for a much needed rest after a strenuous winter, including hours of work to "make" the Junior league.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Kirk and their daugher, Miss Barbara, depart on Monday for some visits in the east. Their son, Radcliffe, who is at school at Groton, will join them there, and go south with the family to Palm Beach.

Mrs. Dexter Fairbank will leave on the 17th to spend a month in Washington with her sister, Miss May Young. Around Eastertime she plans to take her daughter, Miss Lucy, a student at Miss Wright's, and her two sons, who attend the Berkshire school, on a motor trip of a week or ten days through Virginia.

Mrs. George R. Nichols, who is too busy at present with the poster contest of the Women's National Organization for Prohibition Reform to take more than a week's holiday, will go down to French Lick just before Easter with her sons, Frank, who will be home from the Choate school, and George R. III., a Latin pupil.

White Sulphur Springs, Va., will be well populated with Chicagoans about two weeks hence. Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams, with their children, Mary and Cyrus H. III., are to be there for 10 days or so. Other sojourners at the Homestead will be the Howard F. Gillettes and their son, Howard Jr., who will be vacationing from St. Mark's; Mrs. Robert Hixon, who will accompany her daughter, Miss Margaret, from Farmington, and the George F. McLaughlins of Lake Forest.

Some Run Over to Bahamas for Dance or Dinner.

Tropically topical . . . The Dexter Cummings and Mrs. Cummings' mother, Mrs. Phelps B. Hoyt, have departed from Nassau after a ten day stay and should be home by now . . . the John A. Prossers of Lake Forest are at Nassau, and the Owen Barton Joneses are at their island dwelling on Green Cay, and sail over to Nassau for a dinner and dance occasionally (they have Mr. and Mrs. Mac Stone as guests now) . . . McClelland Barclay and his bride have been in Havana, Cuba, since the first of the year, and Mac writes to Chicago friends by air mail that he's the first man to be able to do an "X marks the place where we are" on a postage stamp, as a panorama of the ocean front with the old Spanish place on the Malecon where they're living adorns the air mail stamps.

Personal . . . the James B. Wallers have opened their cottage at Pinehurst, to be there for the rest of the season . . . Mrs. Sherbourne Rockwell of Waterbury, Conn., stopped over in Hammond to visit the Gardner Catlins this week on her way to Tucson . . . Mrs. Joseph Leiter arrived from New Orleans on Thursday to spend a few days with her son, Thomas, at their apartment at 209 Lake Shore drive . . . Mrs. George R. Nichols Sr. is at the Huntington in Pasadena for a six weeks' stay.

While Others Sew for Lent; Additional Bits of News.

Miscellany . . . The Tuesday Lenten sewing meetings of the St. James Women's league are drawing a large attendance, and lots of lovely things are being stitched for the bazaar next November; orders may be sent to the chairman, Mrs. Allan C. Dixon. Mrs. A. C. Cox is taking orders for children's Easter surprise presents, which she makes herself and sells for $1 apiece. . . . Profits from the Twelfth Night ball were distributed among the Boy Scouts of America, the Cook County Emergency Relief camp, the Lake Forest Boy Scouts, United Charities, Illinois Children's Home and Aid, and the National Red Cross drought relief fund. . . . The executive committee of the Woman's Organization for Prohibition Reform, composed of Mrs. William H. Mitchell, Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, Mrs. George Brenna, Mrs. Eugene Thayer, and Mrs. George R. Nichols, will go to Washington to attend the second annual convention. . . . "The Land of Oz," the final Junior league production of the season, opens at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the Selwyn.

Lent Day by Day

JESUS AND MOODS.

Dr. Richard E. Shields.

Executive Secretary Community Church Workers of America.

Jesus was more concerned with individuals than with movements. Personality was the keynote of the religion which he professed, and because he conceived of man as inherently religious everything he did touched religion at the core.

His choice of illustrations, his interest in nature, birds, trees, sun, sheep on the hillside, fish, lakes, dusty roads, and the winsomeness of plain people kept him true to his conviction.

His was soothing and severe. He was gloomy and hopeful. He was conscious of needs and lavish in his disregard of them. As a recent author puts it, "His was the most artistic temperament of the ages." He built for those about him a feeling that moods are controllable by making the mind in its relationship to things of predominant importance.

He devoted hours to the contemplation of the spirit's place and control of attitudes, and it is only by such "wrestling with God" that one achieves an inner poise that can control outward circumstances.

Prayer.

O, Master Mind of Men, life our spirits to the height of thy love, that seeing life whole, we may walk each day as in the beauty of a glorious sunrise. Color us by the prism of joyous faith. Control us by thy greater love.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Koucher of 1400 Lake Shore drive announce the engagement of their daughter, Frances, to J. B. Stillwell Jr. of Indianapolis, Ind. Miss Koucher is a graduate of Gulf Park at Gulfport, Miss. Mr. Stillwell is a Purdue graduate and a member of Sigma Nu. The wedding will take place in June.

Sitting Posture Reveals Pretty or Ugly Figure

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

"Why do fat women all sit that way, I ask you?" queried a companion across the room from the offending sittee.

All fat women do not sit that way—that way being with knees spread wide apart and feet showing a spread of two or three feet. It's only when they do sit that way that it makes them so much more noticeable. Some thin women sit with knees widespread and some middle sized ones do, too. But more fat women seem to carry out the ideal of a general spread for the reason already stated.

Cartoonists fall upon this ugly lower portrayal when they're depicting a tubby female. More often than not her widespread feet are turned over, resting on outer soles. It may be funny in the pictures, but in real life its sheer ugliness robs it of any comic slant. No one ever saw a work of art depicting a woman's legs in the position referred to. The artist's concept of an harmonious line of the body is diametrically opposed.

The musical show producers and revue managers are particularly critical of figures with legs that do not come into a straight, close line. Sitting or standing on the stage, you never see a woman performer, unless she is attempting to depict an ugly phase of character, with legs widespread.

Of course, the longer skirts help conceal what heretofore the feet and leg position made obnoxious in the briefer skirt length. But even the longer skirt does not protect the symmetry of line wanted. Nor does it still elliminate the vulgarity involved in widespread knees.

It's probably because nobody ever told the girl that she keeps on sitting so.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMAN'S DRESS.

This model is especially becoming to women with figures a little above normal. It's the wrapped arrangement of the front that is the secret of it and that creates a lengthened, slimming line. A gathered flounce, low place, provides graceful flare and at the same time detracts from breadth across the front. The surplice bodice is the best known means to detract from width across the bust.

The pattern, 2995, comes in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 39 inch material with ½ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Slip of the Tongue.

I have a young son whom I am determined shall grow up to be a polite, chivalrous young man. To get him accustomed to saying "thank you," I am constantly uttering "ta-ta" to him.

The other evening I found myself seated, at a most elaborate formal dinner party, next to an elderly, distinguished looking man whom I had just met. The maid served him a salad. I leaned over and whispered in a loud command: "Now, dear, say ta-ta to the nice lady." The surprise of all the guests broke into hearty laughter while I, of crimson hue, made many explanations.

Public Is Jury for This Show; Art Included

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

It is always a puzzler how to write fairly about an exhibit which stirs as many currents of feeling as does the No-Jury Society of Artists' exhibition that opens today in the Chicago Evening Post building, 211 West Wacker drive. There is absolute drivel here, and there is sound painting.

There is the work of the amateur and the work of the professional artist. There are some hideous paintings and some which are lovely; there are many that are weak and others which are strong. The hanging committee has been the best judge so far of what merit there is, because the pictures are placed in alphabetical order around the rooms and the only lead one has over another lies in the fact that A precedes Z.

Probably every one will be better pleased if we leave the obvious incompetents to be discovered by the discriminating public and take time here to recite the virtues of the show. J. Boorsma, for instance, offers two stunning water colors, "Swift Current Lake" and "Cascades," powerful in their simplicity of composition and dramatic in their clash of white against black. The delicate portrait of a child by Grace Hannell is lovely. Maecena Barton has a superb nude in "Mitzi," a colored girl against an orange background. An absolute contrast is found in the beautifully handled "Nude" by Todros Geller.

John Goossens has a well modulated and sincere piece of painting in his "The Yellow Plate," one of the best canvases to have come from his brush. Beulah Huston Biddle has a delightful winter playhour, "After School," children skating on a pond. "Leeks and Pomegranates," by Felix Russmann, is a study in blue and brown, engaging in its arrangement, color, and technique. "Sonia," by V. M. S. Hannell, is an interesting portrait. The "Mystic Reality," by Karl Hoeckner, is a dramatic riddle hard to read. Walt Speck is amusingly naive in his "Horse and Dogs" and "The Ballet Dancer." Charles and Fred Biesel are well represented, as is Emile Grueaux. The exhibit will continue for two weeks.

Girl's Lonely Because No Fellow Equals Her Special Ideal

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"'Lonesome' is my name. People have told me the reason why. I am too particular when it comes to a steady boy friend. I don't drink, smoke, pet, and I don't care for cheap dancing. My ideal man is one who is respectable, young, good looking, doesn't smoke, drink, is decent, ambitious, and has a promising future. Must I change my ideals, which I do not care to do? PERPLEXED."

Don't change your ideals, but compromise with them, "Perplexed." You'll have to come around to it, eventually, so why not now? Don't miss the fun in the meantime. Not that the ideal man you map out is so difficult to locate, but couldn't you compromise on his looks, let's say? If one came across your path who is no Adonis he might be able to subscribe to all the other requirements. Wouldn't you be willing to compromise on this point?

Or say he smoked. The world is full of men, real ones, who smoke. Hold out for the decency and respectability. It's foresighted, too, to choose with an eye to future prospects and, of course, for that the man will have to show signs of being ambitious.

There is an annoying sort of smugness about people who hold up their ideals in the challenging sort of way you do, "Perplexed." Not for a moment are we discounting their value. But there are so many human, approachable, lovable people in the world who have fine ideals, but who do not wave them like a red rag in your face.

PALM BEACH SOCIETY

Palm Beach, Fla., March 6.—[Special.]—Mr. George A. McKinlock is returning from Chicago o Saturday and will join Mrs. McKinlock at their home here.

Col. Robert R. McCormick has made application to the war department for a permit to construct 2,000 feet of seawall as a protective measure for the property he has purchased near Boynton, 20 miles south of Palm Beach. The half completed house on this property, once known as "Mizner Mile," is to be remodeled into a residence for use next season.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Windsor Jr., are planning a cruise among the keys in a yacht, the Flamingo, which they have chartered.

Mr. George A. Eddy will return from Chicago to the colony here to join his family on March 20.

Mme. Nina Koshetz, Russian soprano, who sang at the large tea given on Tuesday by Mrs. George Rasmussen, is giving her only public concert on Saturday night in the Ambassador ballroom.

Mrs. Harry L. Thomas of Chicago, who won first prize at the Everglades' costume ball last year, captured the laurel wreth against last night when she appeared in an authentic seventeenth century costume. Mr. Thomas was awarded second prize for his costume. They were judged the wearers of the most authentic historical costumes.

Silhouettes in Hats Take Contrary Slants

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Spring hats are taking on new forms and fresh colors. They are light and becoming, being made often of diaphanous openwork straws, of strips of material fagotted together, of horse hair tulle or lace, not to mention the myriad strawlike weaves that are achieved by the hand crocheting of string, strips of rubber, strips of cellophane, strips of leather and what not.

Fashion is divided between two slants when it comes to smart headgear. There are the hats that are tilted up off the face and those with real brims that, contrariwise, are inclined over one eye or the other and raised up by a cache peigne [which literally means comb hider] in back.

The hat at the top of our drawing illustrates the former tendency in a brand new way. Marcelle Lely makes it of strips of dark green horsehair braid fagotted together with straw thread. It has a bonnet crown rather square at the back and the square effect is carried out in the front by a band set on in the effect of a double brim—much like a medieval coiffe. The ribbon trimming is pale blue satin.

Suzy makes the second hat of fancy paillasson in pale green. It's tilted over the right eye by a ruching of deeper green ribbon with satin finish, set under the brim at the back. The ends of ribbon left plain are drawn through slits in the brim at each side and tied around the crown in a bow in front.

Gitta Gradova Appears with Stock Orchestra

BY EDWARD MOORE.

With her appearance delayed a full year, Gitta Gradova, Chicago pianist, kept her assignment as soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra yesterday afternoon and introduced a work new to Chicago audiences. It was the fourth concerts that Sergei Rachmaninoff has written for the piano.

This was a good choice for both composer and soloist. Rachmaninoff, it would seem, composes the kind of music that Miss Gradova likes to play, at least it sounded as though she enjoyed it. And Miss Gradova has certain feline qualities in her playing, the qualities of lithe alertness and furious attack, without which a person is likely to come off second best in approaching Rachmaninoff's music.

I hardly believe that the fourth concerto is quite up to the second, in which Miss Gradova made her orchestral debut three years ago, or the third, which Vladimir Horowitz converted into terms of hot flame in his own debut here. Rachmaninoff was apparently more concerned with setting down handfuls of difficult notes than he was in building up melodies in his formerly fluent fashion. The third movement is particularly baffling at first hearing. Throughout its brief but rapid course one is constantly expecting a melody to appear. Suddenly there is a smashing chord and the piece is over with no distinguishable theme whatever.

But it is a brilliant display piece for the soloist, and Miss Gradova is a pianist whose own brilliancy, accuracy, and forcefulness become a transforming medium for what she plays. Difficulties were not difficulties for her. They were only part of a stimulating show. Wherefore the concerto, the second part of the program, passed off in a mood of high good feeling between audience and soloist.

In the first part Dr. Stock brought back Beethoven's Second Symphony, one of the early items of a magnificent set. The sturdy vigor and at the same time the poise and serenity of its performance showed all over again that Dr. Stock belongs in the first rank of all the Beethoven interpreters in the world. This has been said before, but truths do not lose by repetition. There was also Richard Strauss' "Thus Spake Zarathustra," a work which I regret to say no longer classifies among my favorite indoor amusements. It is probably my fault.

Students Study Fashions, Dress, Jewels, Cosmetics

Forty-five juniors in the school of home economics at Purdue university arrived here yesterday to spend the week visiting large department stores, etc. They are viewing the latest imported creations and learning the proper use of cosmetics.

The mysteries of dressmaking were listed yesterday to 400 co-eds of Northwestern university by Mme. Maggy Rouff, a Paris fashion designer, who is visiting the United States to study designs here. New gowns were displayed on four models. Mme. Rouff told the co-eds that American and French women dressed quite similarly, while German, Italian, and English women retained their own distinctive modes. Her talk was given under the auspices of the Town club of the university.

PERSIAN ART SHOW DRAWS MANY WHO RECALL '51 EXPOSITION

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, March 6.—[Special.]—It never had been realized there were so many hale and hearty octogenarians and nonogenarians in England as assembled at Burlington house today as guests of Sir Arnold Wilson, an authority on Persia.

Sir Arnold had the interesting idea of inviting to the Persian Art exhibition those who had attended the great exhibition in Hyde Park in 1851. The exhibition staff, expecting a handful of replies, was astounded by a deluge of letters from nearly 700 persons throughout the country. Three hundred and ninety of them turned up today, despite wind and with the thermometer around freezing.

The salons of the Royal academy were thronged with silver-haired men and women.

Food Talk.

We have been asked a number of times lately, "Which kind of spoons should one use when cooking?"

The most indispensable of spoons is the plain wooden one which is used for stirring and beating. And I'm as critical about the shape and feel of a wooden spoon as I am of a fine piece of pottery.

Too many women let price guide them in purchasing kitchen equipment and as a result they never are able to determine the real merits of efficient utensils. Too many times wooden spoons are the kind with deep bowls and abrupt sides.

Wooden spoons are best for stirring cooked foods because they are poor conductors of heat, they give no metallic flavor to foods and they do not mar the pan. I object to slotted spoons because they are difficult to keep clean and a spoon that accumulates and retains from day to day a variety of foods is neither conducive to good flavor nor sanitation.

A white metal spoon is best for observing the progress of cooking such foods as sirups and jellies and a long handled deep bowled metal spoon is best for basting. One can see the color of the basting liquid.

Slotted metal spoons are excellent for lifting foods that need to be drained out of liquid or fat. They are also excellent for beating batters.

GRAHAM MUFFINS.

1 cup bread flour ¾ tsp. salt
1 cup graham flour 1 cup plus 3 tbsp. milk
4 tsp. baking powder 2 tbsp. melted butter
2 tbsp. sugar 1 egg

Sift flour, then measure. Resift with other dry ingredients into the bowl in which muffins are to be mixed. Add the bran that remains in the sifter to dry ingredients. Add milk and butter to beaten egg. Make a depression in dry ingredients, pour in the liquid and mix as quickly as possible. This stirring cannot be too quick. Pour into oiled muffin tins. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) 20 to 25 minutes.

Yield: 12 medium muffins.

POT ROAST.

4 lbs. beef ½ cup hot water
Salt, pepper, flour Boiled, sliced carrots
2 inch cube fat, salt pork Boiled potatoes, cut in eighths

Rub meat with salt and sprinkle with pepper. Try out pork and brown meat in fat. Place in casserole with water, cover and cook 4 hours in a slow oven (250 degrees F.), adding more water as needed and turning 3 times during the cooking. Remove meat to hot serving dish, surround with carrots and potatoes. Pour melted butter over vegetables and garnish with parsley. Cauliflower is an attractive addition to this dish.

It's a Problem to Keep Child from Being a Problem

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"Reading References for the Prospective Mother" will be sent by Mrs. Bevans on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Here is part of an interesting letter about two little girls who are fine and normal. But even our normal ones keep us thinking. I suppose we might say that every child is not a problem but it is a problem to keep every child from being a problem!

So here's the first part of the letter:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: Your articles have been such a help to me in caring for my two little girls. Now I have a few problems that I wish you could help me with.

"Jane will be 4 in October and Doris Jean was 2 last May. Jane has always been a nervous child and is so much more of a baby than Doris Jean. Jane cries and makes a fuss about even the smallest hurt or bump. I have been trying to get her over this and have treated little bumps and hurts lightly, and sometimes ignore her entirely when she fusses about little things.

"Also, I have told her she must not make a fuss about such small things. Now what I would like to know is, will I destroy her confidence in me and keep her from coming to me with other troubles as she gets older? I will appreciate any advice you can give me on this."

Jane is much more of a baby than Doris Jean probably because, way down underneath, she wants to be petted and babied the way Doris Jean is. We always have to keep our eyes "peeled" when the second baby comes along.

First, I would suggest that the mother does not draw any comparisons—as, for instance, "Why, Doris Jean doesn't make as much fuss as you do when she gets hurt. You're more of a baby than she is." Comparisons are always a mistake.

Then when Jane does get hurt I wouldn't ignore it but I would give it attention to see if she's really hurt, comfort her a little, and then talk about something else. This would not tend to keep her from coming to her mother when in trouble, yet it would take into consideration the fact that some children do actually feel pain more than others. Doctors and psychologists both concede this. However, we need not baby a child.

Family Book New Part of Census Report

Washington, D. C., March 6.—(AP)—Facts about one of the oldest institutions—the family—will be accorded the distinction of a census monograph this year—for the first time in history.

Census Director Stewart announced today this new phase of national stock taking, explaining the data gathered was proving such an interesting composite picture of American family life as to merit a special study.

"The results will show whether the American family owns its own home, or whether it lives in a rented house," said the census director.

"It will show families grouped as to the value of holdings—for instance, the number having homes worth $10,000 or more, and the number living in homes worth less than $5,000. Families will be classified also according to the rents they are able to pay. And, of course, we will continue our decennial analysis of the number of persons per family."

Family data for seven states on which announcement already has been made shows the size of the family group continuing its consistent decline since 1850, the first year such study was made.

The 1850 family averaged 5.6 persons; the 1860 family, 5.3; the 1870 family, 5.1; the 1880 family, 5.0; the 1890 family, 4.9; the 1900 family, 4.7; the 1910 family, 4.5; the 1920 family, 4.3.

GRIFFITH WHIPS LEVINSKY; 15,000 SEE FIGHT

SALE OF GOLDEN GLOVES TICKETS NEARS RECORD

18,258 ORDERS FILLED; CROWD MAY PASS 23,000

Boys Hard at Work for Final Bouts.

C. A. A. Invites French

THE amateur boxing champions of France who will fight the Golden Glove winners of America at Chicago Stadium May 12 will be quartered at the Chicago Athletic association while they are in the city. The invitation to the invading forces was extended yesterday by E. C. Deleporte, athletic director of the club.

Announcement of the international match stirred widespread interest among Chicago fans. The ticket manager of the Golden Glove tournament was swamped with applications for seats. The sale will not open, however, for several days.

BY FRENCH LANE.

The world's attendance record for indoor boxing—professional and amateur—is in peril as THE TRIBUNE'S Golden Gloves championship battles of next Wednesday night at the Chicago Stadium draw near.

Reports last night from THE TRIBUNE'S Public Service office, where the tickets are on sale were that 18,258 have been sold.

Thus a new attendance record looms. The old record was 23,000 hung up a year ago at the Stadium where the inter-city match between THE TRIBUNE'S team and the champions of New York, representing the New York News, was staged.

May Enlarge Capacity.

With the demand for tickets greater last night than at any time since the Golden Gloves battles have been fought, plans went forward to move in enough new seats at the Stadium to accommodate a world's record crowd of more than 23,000 for this year's show.

While Chicago will supply the greater part of the vast throng, there will be spectators from every part of the country. That territory in Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Iowa, and Michigan known as Chicagoland will be represented by hundreds of fans.

Most of them are coming to encourage some boy from their own territory. Of the 32 boxers who go into action, nineteen of them hail from around Milwaukee, Rockford, Peoria, Springfield, South Bend, Danville, and other cities in Chicagoland.

Big Demand in New York.

There is such a scramble in New York for seats at Madison Square Garden for the inter-city match with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S team on the night of March 30 that still another world's record may be hung up there. But the capacity of Madison Square Garden is slightly less than that of the Chicago Stadium, and there doesn't seem to be much hope for New York to break the Chicago record which seems certain to be made next Wednesday night.

While the wild battle for seats was under way, the 32 boxers who are to take part in the struggles for the Golden Gloves were back in training yesterday following the brilliant campaigns which carried them through to victories in the early rounds at the Coliseum.

At every loop gymnasium Golden Gloves fighters were in action. At the gymnasiums in more than a dozen other cities the country lads were starting their final training.

Adam Smith Lays Off.

Even Adam Smith, the slashing heavyweight from Rockford, was reported to have remained away from his tasks in a Rockford bakery in order to spend the day at a gymnasium adding zip to the punch which knocked out his foes at the Coliseum.

The training of these 32 boys who are not only fighting for a Golden Glove but also for a place on the Chicago team which will invade New York will continue at a terrific pace until about Monday. Then on Tuesday the out of town boxers will begin moving toward Chicago.

The whole Stadium party will be complete when the first struggle gets under way at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday.

HAVE YOU GOT YOUR GOLDEN GLOVE TICKETS?

Tickets for the Golden Glove finals at Chicago Stadium Wednesday night are going fast, but there still are hundreds of good $1 and $2 seats available at The Tribune Public Service office, 1 S. Dearborn street.

Thirty-two boys, survivors of a field of 2,000, will battle it out for championships and the right to represent Chicago against New York in the intercity bouts at Madison Square Garden, March 30.

You can't afford to miss boxing's greatest bargain.

Pal May Battle Pal for Golden Glove Bantam Title

BY HOWARD BARRY.

It's lucky that Nick Scialaba and George Goodman are two good sports. For although they work together and play together the luck of the draw may force them to fight one another in the climax of the Golden Gloves tournament Wednesday at the Stadium.

Four boys still are in the running for the 118 pound championship and two of these are Nick and George. They fully expect to meet even though they're not pitted against one another in the semi-finals, because neither is figuring on losing that first bout next Wednesday evening.

Work in Printing Shop.

But what are a few punches between friends? They work together in Mr. Goldblatt's printing shop, Nick feeding press and George working on engraving. They go out to lunch together, go to shows together, and then drop over to Kid Howard's gymnasium where Trainer Harry Shall tells each one how to beat up the other. They're the best of pals now and regardless of who wins in the big test they'll still be the best of pals, for boys who fight for Golden Gloves are sportsmen through and through.

Nick already holds one important title, the Central A. A. U. outdoor championship, which he won after having been in the fight game less than a year. He became interested in boxing while still a student at the Washington Grammar school at Grand avenue and Carpenter street, where one of his best friends was Buddy Moore, the Illinois state amateur champion.

Isn't Discouraged by Defeat.

Nick began training at the Edmille Health club and in his first bout was matched against Dick Mastro. Nick lost a decision that time, but it stimulated instead of discouraged him. He began work in earnest and aided by several workouts against Sammy Mandell, he improved rapidly. After six months he engaged Mastro in a return bout and whipped him handily. The boy has had 84 fights in his career, out of which he has won 65, twenty of them by knockouts.

Next to boxing, there's nothing Nick likes quite so well as fishing and swimming. Last summer he went up to northern Wisconsin with Karl Ogren, of last year's Golden Gloves team, Buddy Moore, state amateur champion, and a few other boys. He doesn't say whether they caught many fish, but he claims that they got in a good deal of road work before breakfast to work up an appetite for Karl's cooking. The Swedish boy, it seems, has the reputation of being able to use a skillet almost as well as a pair of gloves.

Nick says he's in love with a very beautiful Italian girl and would like to turn the trip to New York into a honeymoon. But he's not sure yet that he'll win the trip and even then he's not sure he'll win the girl.

Friendly Foes

GEORGE GOODMAN.

Goodman from Omaha.

Nick now lives at 925 Milton avenue with his mother and dad, three brothers and one sister.

His pal, George Goodman, is a westerner, and gained his first boxing experience while attending Omaha Technical High school. He fought on the school team and won the Nebraska state flyweight championship. Upon moving to Chicago in 1926 he gave up the ring game for two years.

His first bout in this city was against Charley Murray at the Hippodrome and he lost a decision. But George quickly got back in stride, and in a return engagement he won by a knockout. Altogether he's had 122 bouts, winning 88.

PHYSICIANS GIVE UP HOPE OF SAVING JOHNSON'S LIFE

St. Louis, Mo., March 6.—(AP)—Ban Johnson, former president of the American league, grew steadily weaker tonight and it was said at St. John's hospital, where he is a patient, that it was only a matter of hours before the prominent baseball leader would pass away.

All hope has been abandoned by his physician, Dr. Robert Hyland, who said Johnson's strong heart is keeping him alive. Johnson, who has been seriously ill for weeks with diabetes and complications, is delirious and sinks into a stupor at times.

SAMMY FULLER WHIPS CANZONERI IN NONTITLE BOUT

Boston, Mass., March 6.—(AP)—Sammy Fuller, rugged Boston battler, scored a clear cut ten round victory over Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight champion, here tonight in the Boston Garden's feature, a nontitle contest.

The Boston Italian bobbed and weaved inside of the titleholder's guard almost at will and piled up six rounds worth of points with his heavy body attack. Fuller weighed 135½, eight ounces over the division limit, and Canzoneri came in at 133½.

RETZLAFF STOPS TOM HEENEY IN SEVENTH ROUND

Detroit, Mich., March 6.—(AP)—Charlie Retzlaff, rangy, hard hitting heavyweight from Duluth, won a technical knockout over Tom Heeney, battered boulder of New Zealand, in the seventh round of a scheduled 10 round bout here tonight. Heeney went down twice under a barrage of rights to the jaw in 53 seconds of milling in the seventh. Heeney weighed 207 and Retzlaff 193.

Retzlaff carried the fight to the New Zealander from the outset, shooting lefts and rights over and under Heeney's guard. He tried to keep the fighting at long range, but Heeney sought refuge in clinching after the opening bell. Although he landed an occasional hard body blow, Heeney was being pounded or chased around the ring most of the time. The Duluth fighter took every round but the sixth.

In the seventh Retzlaff sent Heeney down under a series of swinging rights and lefts to the jaw shortly after the bell called them out of their corners. Heeney came up after a count of seven only to go down again for a count of nine. As Referee Al Day counted 10 Heeney staggered to his feet. Reeling dizzily about, he was clearly unable to continue and Day stopped the fight.

MICHIGAN TRACK TEAM LEADS IN BIG 10 QUALIFIERS

Place Eight; Ohio State Second with Seven.

Madison, Wis., March 6.—[Special.]—Michigan, with eight men, led the field in the number of athletes qualifying in the preliminaries of the twenty-first annual Western conference indoor track meet here tonight. The finals will be held tomorrow.

Ohio State's well rounded team ran second with seven men qualified, closely followed by Chicago with six. Illinois, Indiana and Iowa each qualified five; Wisconsin, three; Purdue, two, and Minnesota, one. Northwestern failed to qualify in any event.

Although competition was keen, no records were broken nor approached except in the 60 yard dash, which Tolan and Campbell of Michigan, and Hess of Minnesota, ran in :06.3. The record, held by Simpson of Ohio and Timm of Illinois, is one-tenth of a second faster.

Wisconsin's hopes of retaining its indoor title were dealt a severe blow when Capt. Henke pulled a tendon in the first trial heat of the 60 yard dash. The fleet Badger last week set a new world's indoor record of :06.9 in the quarter mile and was counted on to establish a new Big Ten mark on his home track. He pulled up lame in the dash and probably will be unable to run for weeks.

Favorites Come Through.

Favorites came through on schedule. Tolan and Campbell, Michigan sprinters, won their heats impressively and are expected to run one-two in the final.

After a round of trials and semi-finals in the quarter mile four men survived for the final: Bloor and Teitelbaum, Ohio State; Russell, Michigan; and Gafke, Wisconsin.

Letts, Chicago, ran two beautifully judged races to qualify in the mile and half mile. In the mile, with four men qualifying in each heat, he was content to breeze home in third place behind Evans, Illinois, and Thompson, Wisconsin, in 4:31. Beetham, Ohio, was fourth. In Letts' heat in the half the field ran well bunched, with Letts always second or third until the last 100 yards, when the Maroon ace stepped out to win by two yards in the slow time of 2:04.8.

Bates, Indiana, and Bloor, Ohio State, ran shoulder to shoulder during most of the second heat, Bates forging ahead a yard just at the tape. Turner, Michigan, turned in the fastest half in the third heat in which he barely beat out Beetham, Ohio State, in 2:01.5.

Sentman Back in Form.

Sentman, Illinois, showed his old time form in his heat in the 60 yard high hurdles, slipping over the sticks perfectly to win by two yards from Black, Ohio State, and Handorf, Iowa, who were a foot apart. The time was :07.6. Hatfield, Indiana, won his heat by a scant yard from Gordon, Iowa, in :07.8.

Keller, Ohio, who beat Sentman a week ago, equaled Sentman's time tonight in the third heat, winning handily from Black, Chicago, and O'Gara, Wisconsin. Eggleston, Michigan; Smith, Purdue, and Thurston, Iowa, finished in that order in the fourth and last heat in :08.

On the basis of tonight's performances the final outcome is decidedly open, with Michigan a slight favorite. Ohio, Illinois, and Indiana are conceded a chance. Wisconsin, due to the loss of Henke, is now given little

AN EXPENSIVE LESSON

TERPSICHORE AND ANGELS VISIT CUB TRAINING DOMAIN

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Avalon, Cal., March 6.—Four of five gents destined to form the backbone of the 1931 Cub pitching staff will perform in the Saturday and Sunday exhibition series with the Los Angeles Coast league team. Malone and Bush will work tomorrow and Root and Smith will pitch in the Sabbath encounter.

This is in line with the announced principle of Manager Hornsby that exhibition games are more valuable as practice producers to the regulars than as experimental media for neophytes. The new Cub boss, you know, has said that he is out to win every game of the exhibition season.

Second Guessing Is Out.

"When you see a team come out of an exhibition game this spring with a larger score than the Cubs', you can mark it down that that team was a better outfit than the Cubs could muster," says Rog. "There is to be no talk about pitchers trying out their knuckle balls or doing any other experimenting on the theory that exhibition games aren't important. All forms of second guessing and alibiing are out. The minors is the place for baseball players to experiment."

Manager Jack Lelivelt of the Angels has announced that he will ask his pitchers who will throw during the two day stay on Catalina island to work only three innings apiece instead of five.

Quit Practice Early.

Lelivelt will bring a squad of 22 men over on the noon boat, and unless the 22 are good sailors it is hoped the old Pacific isn't rarin' up as it is today. Otherwise the Cubs' first scheduled exhibition game may not be played at the appointed time of 1:30.

The practice today was perfunctory in the extreme and the boys knocked off an hour earlier than usual. They must bear down in tomorrow afternoon's game, but that isn't all, for tomorrow night the annual prize waltzing contest for ball players and writers will be held in Mr. Wrigley's $2,000,000 casino. While this may seem like a lark for you who are so far away, the event is the standout social affair of the season and is taken with full seriousness by all concerned.

Terpsichore Reigns Supreme.

There was a time when contestants competed under aliases in deference to the little wimmin back home, but every one in the Cub party who hasn't his wife along has obtained written consent to enter on the understanding that the whole thing is an artistic matter and that frivolity is cast in the background as true Terpsichore reigns supreme.

Kiki Cuyler will lead off the Cub batting order in tomorrow's game, and he, as defending champion, is the favorite to repeat former ballroom triumphs in the evening's gliding.

The batting order will be the same as in the intraclub games—viz: Cuyler, right field; English, shortstop; Hornsby, second base; Wilson, center field; Stephenson, left field; Hartnett, catch; Bell, third base; Grimm, first base; Malone and Bush, pitch.

Sox Make Debut Today with Vic Frasier Facing Houston

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Antonio, Tex., March 6.—Donie Bush will go to press tomorrow with the first edition of his 1931 White Sox. Later there probably will be revisions and make overs because some of the timber might flop, but just now the initial appearance is of interest because it will provide the first real line on the infield the little manager hopes to mold into big league proportions. The premiere will take place at Houston with the Texas league team of that town sharing in nine innings of festivities.

Taking part in Bush's inaugural effort to determine the high value of hopelessness of his bushers will be Vic Frasier, the silent man who fears big cities. He's the lad who did so well last spring that he was carted to Chicago, only to scoot back to Texas when nobody was looking. He has been delegated to attempt some right handed pitching tomorrow. Frasier is in pretty fair shape for work, so if he gets into trouble it will be his own bad luck.

Infield Chases Grounders.

As a final dress rehearsal today for the first appearance of the year, Bush gave his prospective infield a lengthy workout on ground balls. Anybody observing the drill had no trouble noting that the exercises were needed.

Radcliff, Cissell, Appling, and Kamm, who make up the inner defense, all took turns missing hoppers. Some of this may have been due to the uncertainty of the clay terrain. The remainder of the workout was mainly a matter of doing as little work as possible. Bush isn't a slave driver and naturally enough, the boys take advantage of his tenderness.

Hitting made up part of the toil, and this is one feature no baseball athlete ever overlooks. The trouble is that they stand around for ten minute periods while awaiting another whack. In the course of this portion of the drill Eichrodt, a fair outfield prospect, banged a half dozen over the screen in left field. Mel Simons hit 'em on a line through or over the infield, and that is considered a better indication of swatting ability.

Lyons Has Influenza.

When Bush took his troops over to Houston this evening he didn't have a veteran pitcher in the outfit. Originally he intended to include Ted Lyons, skilled Louisiana bachelor, but Ted joined the flu colony now popular and must stay indoors for a few days. Doctors meanwhile will needle him with anti-cold serum. Irving Jeffries, University of Kentucky's one time star athlete and now Bush's second choice for both short and third, also continues an absentee. He can't put on a uniform because of a bad spike wound.

Braxton was among those who threw impressively in batting practice today. Bush is enthusiastic about him. Last year when Washington traded him with Benny Tate to the Comiskey bunch for Art Shires, the southpaw was weak for lack of weight. Now he has added about 15 pounds to his sparse frame and his mental attitude is entirely different. The trouble is that Bush already has more pitchers than he can use. The crying need eventually will be for one star infielder. Give that to the south side team and it might be right up among the elite.

Two Games at Houston.

The trip to Houston involves two games, provided there is no weather interference. If Frasier gets into a jam before four or five innings tomorrow, Weiland or Moore will be employed in a relief role. Whichever doesn't get the rescuing job will draw the start in Sunday's meeting.

KING RECEIVES BOXING LESSON, TUFFY $25,000

Bozo Is Victor Over Scozza.

Fight Decisions

At Boston, Mass.—Sammy Fuller, Boston, beat Tony Canzoneri [10].
At Worcester, Mass.—Lou Brouillard, Worcester, beat Baby Joe Gans, California [10].
At Detroit, Mich.—Charlie Retzlaff, Duluth, Minn., stopped Tom Heeney, New Zealand [7].
At Hartford, Conn.—Bat Battalino beat Young Zazzarino, Marion, N. J. [10].

BY WILFRID SMITH.

King Levinsky paid Tuffy Griffith $25,000 for a boxing lesson last night at the Stadium.

While $25,000 for 30 minutes is a price most boxers would find prohibitive, it will be reasonable if last night's lesson convinces Levinsky that he should go back to promiscuous glove throwing as the quickest and only certain method for him to win.

Of course, Levinsky didn't pay this fee directly. He was the middleman for 15,096 fans who turned in $53,284.22 to the box office. Ray Alvis, Levinsky's manager, received 60 per cent of the net, or approximately $27,600. From this he will pay the stipulated $25,000 to Jack O'Keefe and Tuffy Griffith.

Forgets His Right.

Levinsky looked better as a boxer last night, but with that improvement he apparently had forgotten how to close in with his famous right hand, which put Lomski on the floor eleven times in one night. Perhaps, this forgetfulness should be credited as an assist to Griffith, for Tuffy's ducking and weaving kept Levinsky trying to figure out when to strike. Invariably when the King had made up his mind, the opportunity had passed.

The world was made of left hand gloves for the battling fish peddler. On nearly every occasion, Griffith's left jab swished into the King's features and Levinsky staggered backwards, no sooner than he had started an advance.

Griffith Fights Carefully.

Griffith fought carefully. Only once did he fail to remember it was better to jab and clinch than to triumph by a knockoff. And that once, in the sixth round, Levinsky brought an overhand right smashing down on Tuffy's shoulder. Tuffy spun around, and while the shoulder isn't a vulnerable spot by any means, it demonstrated the power that is Levinsky's.

Griffith had the better of the sharpshooting in every round. After the seventh round, Levinsky held in the clinches and Referee Phil Collins had difficulty prying him loose. The King should have been willing to let go, for Tuffy rubbed his glove in his face and adopted other tactics which must have been irritating.

The finish of the first round, when the bell halted the men as they engaged in toe to toe slugging, probably was the most exciting. The crowd was in an uproar, expecting, perhaps, one of the heavyweights would fall. But the bell intervened and Griffith's corner men sent him out for the second round to jab, which involved less risk.

Tuffy Wins Every Round.

In the third round Tuffy rocked Levinsky with a right to the jaw. Thereafter Levinsky's efforts were ineffective and widely spaced. He fanned his right past Tuffy's head often to keep his followers, among them his manager-sister, Mrs. Lena Levi, hoping he might connect with a K. O. punch.

The remaining action came in the final round. Each landed a solid punch, but Tuffy unloaded another to assure himself a complete sweep of all the rounds.

Battling Bozo from Birmingham, Ala., won a ten round decision over Lou Scozza, Buffalo, N. Y., in the semi-windup. While the decision was acceptable, Bozo's fighting certainly was a travesty on accepted ring tactics. He violated every accepted tenet, laughing at Scozza, covering up without attempting to fight, only to lash out unexpectedly and from all angles to pile up winning points.

These clowning practices, as peculiar to boxing as if Nick Altrock should be sent up to bat for Washington instead of prancing about the diamond before game time, had the Italian willing to whale Bozo across the ring. However, try his best, Scozza couldn't find an opportunity.

Calmes Gets Draw.

Baxter Calmes, a light heavyweight, once from Wichita, announced as residing in Oklahoma City and actually living in Chicago, came from behind to get a draw with Mickey McFarland in eight rounds. Calmes, a made over southpaw scrapper, took Mickey's best clubbing right, and then, when Mickey faded in the last rounds, finished with enough points to square the count.

Paul Dazzo, former Golden Gloves fighter, knocked out Ernie Dugan of Toledo in three rounds. Dugan had no defense for Dazzo's left hook, and, after being knocked down for the ten count, writhed, as if in pain, claiming a foul. Referee McNamara was not convinced by the pantomime.

Solly Schuman of Chicago won in six rounds from George Stokes of Gary, Ind., in the best preliminary. In the opening four rounder Joe Corbett, Chicago, whipped Knute Dane, also of Chicago. Dane was knocked down twice in the first and once in the second round.

MAROONS MEET OHIO IN FINAL HOME CAGE GAME

Hope of Victory Lies in Stopping Fesler.

Wesley Fesler, one of the greatest athletes Ohio State has ever produced, will lead the Buckeye basketball team against the Maroons tonight in Bartlett gymnasium. The game is the final engagement on the Chicago home schedule, and only the game with Michigan at Ann Arbor Monday night remains for Coach Norgren's men.

Capt. Marshall Fish will be assigned the difficult task of holding Fesler, who scored seven baskets in the game at Columbus when Chicago defeated the Buckeyes by a margin of one point, 26 to 25. Harry Ashley, guard, sank the winning free throw after the gun had sounded.

The Maroons have a good chance of repeating that victory, for their last game, against Illinois, was their best performance since their opening games. Yates has been badly off in his shooting since midseason, but the little forward is about due to have a good night in hitting the basket.

Tonight's game will be the final home appearance of Capt. Fish and Yates, both of whom are seniors. Probable lineups:

CHICAGO.		OHIO.
Yates	F	Ervin
Stephenson	F	Fesler
Parsons	C	Mattison
Porter	G	Larkins
Fish (C.)	G	Hoffer

PURDUE EYES SECOND

Lafayette, Ind., March 6.—[Special.]—Purdue will attempt to assure itself a share of the runner-up honors in the Big Ten basketball race here tomorrow night when the Boilermaker five, which has shown surprising development since the start of the season, meets Iowa in the season's final.

Although the hawkeyes have fared badly in the current Big Ten race, they hold a victory over Purdue, which makes the Boilermakers doubly anxious to end the season with a victory. Purdue has not finished below second place in the last five years. Probable lineups:

PURDUE.		IOWA.
Kellar (C.)	F	Williamson
Eddy	F	Mowry
Stewart	C	Rogers
Wooden (C.)	G	Riegert
Parmenter	G	Reinhardt

$30,000 Loss Estimated on Carnera Bout

Miami, Fla., March 6.—(AP)—As a result of the shrinkage of ringside estimates today, sponsors of the battle of the cracked rib between Primo Carnera and Jimmy Maloney faced a loss of $30,000 or more on the last of Miami's winter fistic ventures.

This was based on the financial report, showing gross gate receipts of $53,115.89, including the government tax, and net figures of only $43,136.89, although Promoter Frank J. Bruen declines to make any statement other than he experienced "some loss." Bruen had figured he would need between $75,000 and $100,000 to break even.

There were fewer than 10,000 cash customers in the Madison Square Garden stadium last night, although the generous distribution of passes added perhaps 50 per cent to the actual attendance.

Carnera, who scored an unpopular decision through the verdict of Referee Elmer McClelland of Detroit, appeared publicly today without manifesting any ill effects or further damage to his fractured side. His board of managers appeared jubilant over the victory he scored under handicaps and scouted talk of another match with Maloney in New York or Boston, prior to Carnera's engagement to meet the winner of the Schmeling-Stribling title match.

BRUINS ENLIST CHICAGO TALENT FOR AKRON GAME

The Bruin basketball team that plays the Akron Firestones tomorrow night at Broadway armory will be made up entirely of Chicago players. Rut Walters, former Northwestern star, Red Barek, and Red Skurnick have been signed especially for this contest. The other players will be Wickhorst, Bramhall, and Murphy. Other Bruin players who participated in American Professional league games have been dismissed until next season.

One of the most interesting features of the game will be the third meeting of the two Murphys, Charley, formerly of Loyola, and Charley, late of Purdue. Purdue and Loyola alumni and students have obtained blocks of seats and indications are that there will be plenty of college spirit exemplified.

Akron will present one of the tallest players in basketball today in Slim Shoun, who is 7 feet 2 inches tall.

There will be a preliminary game between St. Andrews and St. Brendans, champions, respectively, of the north and south sections of the Catholic league.

N. U. Swimmers to Face Gophers in Last Home Meet

Northwestern university's swimming team will end its home schedule in a dual meet with Minnesota at Patten gymnasium tonight. The Purple swimmers have won all of their dual meets this year with the exception of the Michigan meet. Following tonight's meet the Wildcats will prepare to defend their Western conference championship at Ann Arbor, Mich., next Friday and Saturday nights.

Columbus Senators Ball Club Changes Name to Red Birds

Columbus, O., March 6.—(AP)—The Columbus Senators today passed out of existence. From now on the Columbus American association baseball team will be known as the Columbus Red Birds. This action was taken by L. S. MacPhail, president, and Judge Benson W. Hough, member of the board of directors.

JAMESTOWN TO RACE IN CLASSIC AT ARLINGTON

George D. Widener of Chester Hill, Pa., yesterday forwarded to the Arlington Jockey club the nomination of Jamestown, 2 year old champion of last season's racing in America, for the third running of the $70,000 added Arlington Classic, a gallop of a mile and a quarter for 3 year olds to be run next July.

It will be one of the few engagements outside of New York, for Jamestown this season. He was kept out of the Preakness stakes and Kentucky Derby because Trainer Andrew Joyner did not wish to hurry the colt.

Beat Equipoise at Saratoga.

Last year Jamestown won revivals of the Flash stakes, United States Hotel stakes, Saratoga Special, Grand Union and the Belmont Futurity, earning $151,925. He beat Equipoise, the biggest 2 year old money winner of the season, whose earnings were $155,135, in the Saratoga Special and the Futurity.

Jamestown's sire, St. James, won the Saratoga Special and Futurity renewals of 1923. Jamestown has wintered at Erdenheim farm in Pennsylvania.

Equipoise was one of the earliest Classic nominations. Albert Bostwick cabled the entry of Mate from England yesterday. The renewal of the feud between Jamestown, Equipoise and Mate will attract much interest this year.

Many Other Stars to Run.

Other early Classic nominations, it was announced by the Arlington officials, have been Mrs. Katherine Hitt's Sun Meadow, William Woodward's Ormesby, the Tennessee stable's Vanderpool, Joseph E. Widener's Novelist, Griffin Watkins' Insco, Walter J. Salmon's Ladder, and the Greentree stable's Twenty Grand.

DE PAUL QUINTET TO COMPETE IN A. A. U. TOURNEY

De Paul university's basketball team has been entered in the National A. A. U. tournament which opens at Kansas City tomorrow. This is the first time De Paul has entered the meet.

"We hope to duplicate the feat of Butler university," said Coach Jim Kelly yesterday, "Butler has been the only college team to win the national meet. The competition will be unusually spirited this year. Quite a few college teams are entered."

The De Paul team will leave today for Kansas City to have time for preliminary practice. The Blue Demons' record for this season includes 13 victories in 16 games.

49 TEAMS ENTER.

Omaha, Neb., March 6.—(AP)—Preliminary and first round pairings for the annual National A. A. U. basketball tournament which opens tomorrow night at Kansas City were announced here today by A. A. Schabinger, Creighton university basketball coach and chairman of the committee in charge. Forty-nine teams from twenty states are entered.

BEATTY LEADS IRISH MEET

Notre Dame, Ind., March 6.—[Special.]—The fifth annual Central intercollegiate conference meet got under way here tonight with 15 preliminary heats in five events which sifted the field from 75 to 45 in the 60 yard dash, high and low hurdles, quarter, and half miles.

Eugene Beatty, Michigan Normal, skimmed to firsts in both hurdle races with plenty of room in each of his heats to lead individual qualifying and to establish himself as a favorite in tomorrow's finals. His teammate, Simmons, took first in his heat of the 65 yard lows.

Notre Dame led qualifying with five firsts, two seconds, and four thirds and is a heavy favorite to win. Kelly and MacBeth took firsts in the quarter mile and Alex Wilson qualified easily in the half for the Irish. Bill McCormick led his heat in the sprints and Capt. O'Brien took a first and second in the hurdles.

At least half of the existing C. I. C. marks are expected to fall tomorrow. Michigan Normal, although it lacks all around strength, is favored to place high in the standings on Beatty's work, as is Marquette, which placed five men tonight. Western State Normal and Michigan State are strong in the field and distances. Summaries:

Oklahoma Joins California as Quails' Friend

BY BOB BECKER.

While many of the states show considerable concern about the quail situation and conservation departments and sportsmen are scurrying around trying to find a way to bring back the bob whites, Oklahoma joins California in a practical constructive system of game breeding, refuges, and vermin control that is going to put quail in the coverts and good sport into the hands of the upland game bird hunters who are pouring thousands of dollars into the state treasuries with their license fees.

About a month ago we pointed out how California had gone into the quail business by establishing hundreds of bird refuges and breeding grounds in coöperation with the landowners. These refuges are leased from the farmer, planted with food for the birds, are watched over by wardens, who know how to trap out the vermin, and are provided with water and cover for the quail.

Now Oklahoma announces a similar state-wide quail growing system. Central states sportsmen, especially those in Illinois and neighboring states, where the quail situation is anything but favorable and the future about the same, should read the following description of Oklahoma's natural system of raising quail with considerable interest and envy, no doubt.

Oklahoma has leased for ten years 512 tracts of land throughout the state. These areas—one in each county—are listed as main and secondary refuges. There is one main refuge in each county. These total 406,791 acres. The largest is 26,000 acres. The secondary refuges (735 of them) range in size from 160 acres to a single section of land and total around 400,000 acres.

All of this land was leased for a nominal sum from the farmers. In other words, a farmer can get a little "relief" in the way of cash by just letting the state look after part of his land which will grow both crops ands birds. It's a case of the landowner producing a "secondary crop" in the shape of bird life and getting paid for it.

The state stocks each of these refuges with quail and pheasants, posts and patrols the areas, and institutes a rigid system of vermin control. Too many states are ignoring this important angle in bird production. It takes a skilled field man to handle the predators, a combination of an outdoor fan, a naturalist, trapper, and woodsman who knows his natural history.

In these days of expensive artificial propagation of game birds Oklahoma and California have hit on a practical, workable system of getting game birds in a natural way, which also ties up the farmer to the state and the sportsman. We found that even Florida, a state with vast areas of wild land, has quail refuges scattered over the state. When we left Punta Gorda a few days ago C. C. Woodward, the game commissioner, was busy trapping out the birds on one refuge in order to plant them in a certain section.

We have a hunch that hunters in Oklahoma and California will hail the expenditure of their money on statewide systems of bird refuges with loud cheers, because they are going to get something for their money.

Roosevelt and Tuley Win in City Prep Race

The fight to determine the team which will represent the west and north sections in the finals for the City league lightweight basketball title still is unsettled.

Tuley and Roosevelt won yesterday as the semi-finals came to a close in the north and west sections. Marshall and Tuley will battle next week in the playoff for the west section championship. The winner will meet Roosevelt of the north section.

Tuley, favorite in the race, rallied in the second half to hand Marshall its first defeat in the semi-finals, 37 to 21, at Crane gymnasium. Marshall, with Feingold leading the attack, led at the end of the first quarter, 10 to 9, but baskets by Silver and Lakin tied Marshall, 16 to 16, at the half. Tuley continued to score and took the lead as the game was resumed. Marshall was held to one basket during the third quarter, Feingold scoring just before being taken out on fouls, and Tuley held a 28 to 18 lead as the period ended. Thirty fouls were called.

Roosevelt, which rolled up ten league victories, defeated Lane, the team which shared honors in the north section, 23 to 18, at Tuley gymnasium. Heyman helped Roosevelt hand Lane its second defeat by scoring 11 points.

Lindblom heavies scored their first triumph by winning from Calumet at White City, 30 to 24. Yansanitis starred for Lindblom, piling up six baskets and three throws. The victors led at half time, 12 to 10. The lineups:

U. S. RUBBER CO. PREPARES FOR FUTURE TRADE

Reports 1930 Sales of $157,074,760.

BY O. A. MATHER.

Whatever the trials and disappointments suffered by American industries last year, many big concerns at least utilized slack times to prepare for future prosperity. Something of this rejuvenation process is reflected in the annual report of the United States Rubber company, made public yesterday.

J. B. DAVIS JR. [Underwood & Underwood.]

"During 1930 the company continued with the reorganization of its general financial and business structure and has carried out many changes in connection with the realignment of its production and distribution activities," Chairman F. B. Davis Jr. says. "It is natural that this has seriously affected the results for the year but with the return of better business conditions the benefits to be derived from the reorganization will be evident."

Cities Inventory Losses.

Despite the decline in tire prices, net sales of United States Rubber last year totaled $157,074,760, compared with $192,942,040 in 1929. But the decline in prices of tires and crude rubber resulted in severe inventory losses, which totaled $11,083,799. Depreciation charges also increased. The final result was a loss of $6,980,141 from operations and a surplus deficit of $7,120,656. Net income for 1929 was $574,009, equivalent to 88 cents a share on the preferred stock.

Mr. Davis points out that the market price of crude rubber fell from 14 cents a pound at the beginning of 1930 to a low of 7¾ cents and finished the year at 8¾ cents. The company's plantations produced 36,620,000 pounds, compared with 32,971,000 in 1929. The balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1930, shows current assets of $84,147,643 and current liabilities of $11,739,006, which gives the company a satisfactory position.

J. I. Case Reports Income.

Another big concern to suffer from depression, particularly that of agriculture, was the J. I. Case company, makers of farm equipment. The annual report shows net income for 1930 of $2,638,198, after a special appropriation of $250,000 to contingent reserve. This income was equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $9.67 a share on 194,980 common shares outstanding. This compared with net income of $3,403,753, or $18.94 a share on 194,471 common shares.

"During the early months of 1930 sales were maintained at a very satisfactory level," President Leon R. Clausen says. "Unfavorable agricultural conditions developed in the early summer and prevailed during the remainder of the year. The decline in prices of farm products, the disturbed market conditions, and the severe drought which covered an extensive area of good agricultural territory resulted in a diminished purchasing power and a very much reduced demand for farm equipment."

The balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1930, shows current assets of $42,089,- and current liabilities of $5,668,-. Reserves totaled $5,550,000 and earned surplus was $11,981,339.

Weekly Reviews More Cheerful.

In contrast with corporation reports for last year, the weekly mercantile reviews make cheerful reading. Bank clearings this week totaled $9,450,-, the largest total for any week this year, although 16.3 per cent below the same week last year. Business failures showed improvement over most of the preceding weeks this year. They totaled 614, compared with 650 last week, 732 two weeks ago and 527 a year ago.

"While business, meaning wholesale or retail distribution and industry, maintains much the same moderate pace that has distinguished it since the outset of year," Bradstreet's review says, "there seems adequate foundation for the statement that this movement is going in a forward direction, slowly, perhaps, and carefully but with volume gaining rather steadily as the year enters the first of the spring months."

"Conservatism in appraising such spirit in business as has occurred recently reflects the continued presence of numerous unsatisfactory phases," Dun's review says. "Yet the undercurrent of better feeling in various quarters is sustained. The comprehensive list of wholesale commodity prices shows an excess of advances this week for the first time this year."

Hoover Discusses Situation in Oil Industry with Cabinet

Washington, D. C., March 6.—(AP)—President Hoover discussed the oil situation of the country with members of his cabinet today in the regular Friday cabinet meeting.

Secretary Lamont, who is a member of the federal oil conservation board, is seeking an agreement from eastern importers of oil which looks to a limitation of imports in an effort to give small independent operators a market for oil which is now going to waste.

Pending these discussions, President Hoover is withholding decision on the calling of a governors' conference requested recently by the governors of oil producing states.

Attitude of Importers.

Practically all the large importers have signified their intention and willingness to enter into a fair agreement, except one or two who will probably see Secretary Lamont early next week.

Secretary Wilbur, as chairman of the oil conservation board, said he expected several days would be required by the importing companies to work out a definite program of curtailing imports.

He said it would require considerable study of marketing zones, the price in various areas, and existing contracts binding the various companies to formulate the plan.

The Gulf company, the Standard of New Jersey, and most of the other leading importers have notified the government they were willing to assist as much as possible in carrying out the proposals advanced by President Hoover and now being negotiated by Secretary Lamont.

Widespread Price Cuts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 6.—Widespread cuts in prices of crude oil and gasoline were announced today following the slash of 2 cents a gallon and 40 cents a barrel in its price for crude by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

The reductions emphasized the unsettled condition of the industry and it was believed they would serve to curb the industry's tendency toward overproduction.

Weakness of the price structure quickly acted as a brake on Oklahoma's output. In an attempt to bolster the market the Oklahoma corporation commission rescinded its oral order issued Wednesday increasing the allowable output of the Oklahoma City field to 150,000 barrels a day from 125,000. Gov. M. H. Murray suggested withdrawal of the order after he had conferred yesterday with leading oil men of his state.

Meets Lower Schedule.

The Magnolia Petroleum company, subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New York, reduced its mid-continent crude oil prices to meet the lower schedule of the Standolind Crude Oil Purchasing company, subsidiary of Standard Oil of Indiana. Magnolia's new prices range from 40 to 43 cents a barrel for oil between 36 and 29 degrees gravity.

Other companies meeting the reduction were the Tidal Refining company, the Tidal Western Oil corporation, the Continental Oil company, the Mid-continent Petroleum corporation, and the Standard Oil Company of Kansas.

Prices of Wyoming crude oil also were marked down to conform with the education in the Midcontinent area. Salt Creek crude prices were cut 24 to 37 cents a barrel against the protests of independent operators. In Omaha the Standard Oil Company of Nebraska decreased its gasoline tank wagon prices 2 cents a gallon to 15¼ cents, including a 4 cent state tax, and its competitors followed.

REPLIES TO PROTEST

Replying to the protest of Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma against a cut in crude oil prices, Edward G. Seubert, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, yesterday wired that "the economic situation forced us to cut prices of crude oil."

He added that "our action was taken after weeks of deliberation before we knew of your commission's order increasing the allowance output for your state."

"The impelling reason was that, in the face of overproduction, there is excessive drilling and constantly increasing willingness on the part of producers to accept lower prices," the message continued.

Buying by Competitors.

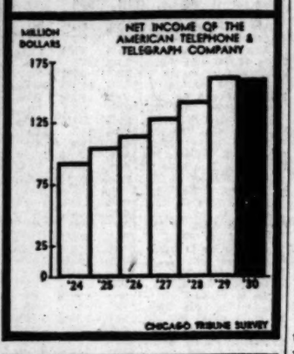
"Our competitors have taken advantage of this situation, and are now buying more than a hundred thousand barrels of crude daily, much of which is from your state, at prices below those we have been paying. These companies or their connections are using the cheaper crude to compete with us in selling finished products.

"Crude oil buying must be on an equal basis. There cannot be one scale of prices for one group of companies and another for their competitors. It is obvious we cannot pay more for crude than our competitors and meet their prices in wholesale and retail markets, and it is equally obvious we cannot expect our patrons to pay more for our products than they pay our competitors.

Domestic Production.

"Domestic production is responsible for this entire situation. We are in sympathy with your effort to improve the situation, and sincerely desire to coöperate in every reasonable way. We will gladly pay more for crude the moment other producers are willing to do so, but nothing short of fair and united action by all producers in all the big producing states will change the present situation."

TELEPHONE COMPANY INCOME HELD NEAR RECORD LEVEL



DROUGHT HITS OUTPUT OF HYDRO-ELECTRICAL POWER IN MIDWEST

Production of electric power by hydro-electrical plants in the middle west was curtailed last year by the drought that lowered the flow of rivers. However, slack industrial conditions reduced the demand for power and there was no appreciable shortage.

Conditions last year and at present were explained yesterday by Louis H. Egan, president of the Mississippi River Power company, which operates the great dam and power plant on the Mississippi river at Keokuk, Ia.

"Because of the low stage of the Mississippi river last year the production of power was about 10 per cent less than in 1929, measured in kilowatt hours," Mr. Egan said. "We sell power in two ways. One way is on 'firm' contract, guaranteeing a certain amount of power at a certain rate. The other way is by a contract for excess power when, as and if it is available and at a lower rate.

"Last year we had no excess power to sell, but there was little demand for such current because of slack industrial conditions. Recently the Mississippi river has been rising and our output is above a year ago, as also are our sales because of an additional short term contract. In general, however, there is no particular increase in the demand for power and production for the whole country is probably around 4 per cent below a year ago."

Gross revenue of the Mississippi Power company last year was $3,495,-864, compared with $4,171,456 in 1929, and net income was $1,706,411, compared with $2,058,708. Dividends were amply earned on the $8,234,475 6 per cent preferred stock, which is publicly held. The company's $16,000,000 of common stock is owned by the National Electric Light and Power company, which is controlled by the North American company.

Everitt Asserts Nation Is Emerging from Depression

George B. Everitt, president of the Chicago mail order and chain store house of Montgomery Ward & Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting yesterday that the country is emerging from the depression and that business during 1931 will show improvement over last year.

GEORGE B. EVERITT. [Underwood & Underwood.]

Particular significance was attached to Mr. Everitt's statement because he was one of the few outstanding business leaders who uttered a note of caution and warning when the country was riding the crest of the 1929 wave of prosperity.

Optimistic concerning the general outlook, Mr. Everitt was even a bit more sanguine over the prospects of his own company this year.

Confident of Improvement.

"We know [and when I say 'we' I mean the country, and, for that matter, the world] that we are coming out of this period of depression, and at Montgomery Ward's we know that we are going to get our share of the business and our share of the profits," he declared.

"I do not hesitate to forecast that Montgomery Ward will restore itself to a satisfactory earnings basis perhaps a little ahead of the general restoration."

The merchandise executive said that his company is now in a better position than it was twelve months ago to take advantage of conditions. The same holds true for business generally, he said.

"We have gone as far as we can legitimately go in reducing the cost of doing business. There is a certain elemental organization which must be kept together whether the volume of business justifies it or not. Business is now 20 to 30 per cent under normal, a situation which has not existed in generations."

Mr. Everitt added that the directors and the management did not wish to overemphasize the difficulties, but he hoped that the stockholders would not underestimate the problems with which business was confronted during the year.

Attitude of Management.

"As a management group," he stated, "it is natural for us who are closely tied to the company's welfare to regret on the one hand that we made only a small profit but on the other hand to be happy that we have not had a loss which could easily have developed into several millions during a period of continually falling commodity prices and business depression."

There were 2,971,504 shares of stock represented at the meeting either in person or by proxy. This representation amounted to 62 per cent of the total outstanding stock.

Harry E. Hughes, vice president in charge of mail order sales, was elected a director to succeed Charles H. Thorne. The vacancy caused by the death of F. Edson White was not filled.

STOCK MART VALUES INCREASE 5 BILLIONS DURING LAST MONTH

New York, March 6.—(AP)—The market value of all shares listed on the New York Stock exchange increased $4,992,809,772 during February to a total of $57,054,766,481 as of March 1.

As of March 1 there were 1,300 issues aggregating 1,297,879,293 shares listed on the exchange, against 1,303 issues aggregating 1,298,707,031 Feb. 1. The average market value of all listed shares March 1 was $43.96, compared with $40.09 Feb. 1.

Total borrowings by members of the exchange against stock exchange collateral March 1 amounted to 3.22 per cent of the market value of all listed shares on that date, a new low record. It represented a decrease of 0.03 per cent during the month.

R. K. O. PROFIT SHOWS GAIN OF OVER 102 PCT.

New York, March 6.—(AP)—Radio-Keith-Orpheum corporation today took a position high in the list of companies showing increased earnings for 1930 over 1929, by reporting an increase of 102.75 per cent.

Net profit for 1930 after payment of dividends on outstanding preferred stock of subsidiaries was given as $3,385,628, compared with $1,669,564 for 1929. Included in net profit for 1929 was an item of $525,035, representing nonoperating profits, compared with similar items in 1930 profits of $36,197.

"Thus," the report says, "the increase in net profits for the year 1930 over those for the year 1929, without considering in either year nonoperating profits, is 192 2-3 per cent."

Net for 1930 was equal to $1.45 per share on the 2,328,250 shares of class "A" stock outstanding, compared with 92 cents a share on 1,808,409 shares outstanding for 1929.

American Snuff.

I am in receipt of your letter and information concerning the status of the common stock of Cities Service company and I am writing to inquire about the common stock of American Snuff company. A stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed.—Mrs. E. N.

American Snuff company has been in business since 1900 when it acquired the snuff business of American Tobacco company., Continental Tobacco company, and P. Lorillard company, and the stock of Atlantic Snuff company and George W. Helme company. Because of alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law in 1911 it was obliged to transfer certain properties to two new companies, the George W. Helme company and the Weyman Bruton company, which has since changed its name to U. S. Tobacco company. The two latter concerns have been its chief competitors in recent years.

Common dividends have been paid regularly at varying rates for 29 years. From 1925 through 1928 earnings increased each year. Since then they have declined somewhat.

Net income last year was $1,893,049, against $2,109,631 in 1929 and $2,175,-535 in 1928.

Earnings in 1930 were nearly eight times dividend requirements on the 39,528 shares of 6 per cent preferred [par $100] and were equal to $5.76 per share on the 440,000 common shares [par $25], against $4.25 per share the year before.

At the close of 1930 current assets were $10,370,765, not including $2,685,-220 securities [at cost]. Current liabilities were $1,015,200. This left a working capital of $9,355,558, which compares with $9,459,448 at the close of 1929.

There was no funded debt. Surplus was increased last year from $6,677,-450 to $6,903,331. Good will, trademarks, etc., are carried in the asset column at $10,126,996.

The current dividend rate on the common is $3 per annum. Extras in 1930 totaled 50 cents per share and on Jan. 2, 1931, a 25 cent extra payment was made. The common deserves a fairly good rating.

The company does not publish interim reports, but in May, 1930, the president stated that business that far in 1930 had been ahead of the corresponding period of 1929 and that results for the full year would depend upon general business conditions in the south and to a large extent upon the cotton crop and its price. Apparently business in the latter half of last year accounted for the decline in earnings from 1929 levels.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 6.—They pulled the peg at last, the gentlemen of the pool operating in Auburn Auto, and the showy leader of the long January-February stock market advance went skidding for 17½ points today.

With it went two other "demonstration" favorites of the self-appointed market makers, Case Threshing Machine and Mullins Manufacturing, the one for a loss of 6 and the other 7¾ points. International Business Machine dropped 2¼ points and Columbian Carbon 3½. Other volatiles elevated beyond their obvious deserts came off their perches in much the same undignified fashion.

And with them the upset pacemakers dragged down such solid citizenry of the list as American Can, which lost 3¼ points on the day's operations; Allied Chemical off 7, American Water Words down 4, Eastman Kodak 5, Western Union Telegraph 4, Westinghouse 3¼, Johns-Manville and Consolidated Gas 2 each, and United States Steel 1¾ points.

A Run-Around.

It was about the worst run-around the market has come in for, all things considered, since it turned on its bear tormentors back around the first of the year. Whether the so-called constructive element was suddenly caught napping or whether it had yielded to the conclusion that the signs of business improvement were not yet sufficient to warrant a continuation of effort on the upside and decided temporarily to give up the struggle is something that has the rank and file guessing. Some close observers were saying after the close of business today that it might take two or three more sessions to clear up this point.

One thing was obvious beyond dispute, however, and that was that some of the busy pools which have been cooperating so effectively in pegging up prices were unloading their holdings for all the traffic would bear.

Bulls Show Fight.

The bulls made some show of fight in the early dealings and for a time displayed a determination to attempt a fresh rally, but their resistance weakened steadily, with the result that prices slid off, most of them hitting their lows of the day in the last few minutes of trading. Market standbys, such as United States Steel, American Can, American Telephone, General Electric, and General Motors, held out the longest, but they, too, had to give as the pressure grew in the afternoon. The utilities held out against the trend in group formation, but the hopes banked on them failed likewise to materialize.

Oils were generally disliked on all 'round price cutting, the group's losses being the sharpest in some time. It is probable, also, that the report of the Rockefeller general education board, showing that it had reduced its holdings in Standard Oil of New Jersey to the extent of some 285,680 share during the last year, cut considerable ice in the situation.

Walgreen February Sales Show Slight Decrease

Walgreen company reported sales for February of $4,146,367, compared with $4,209,498 for the corresponding 1930 month, a decrease of $63,131, or 1.5 per cent. Two months' sales aggregated $8,597,710, against $8,491,365 for the first two months of last year, an increase of $105,845, or 1.2 per cent. At the end of February there were 442 stores in operation.

DIVIDEND PAYMENTS IN FEBRUARY TOTAL NEARLY 238 MILLIONS

New York, March 6.—(AP)—February cash dividend payments made by domestic corporations totaled $237,903,-422, Standard Statistics company reports. Rails led the list of major divisions with a total of $55,025,677, while electric light and gas companies were next with $46,050,311.

Mead, Johnson & Co. today declared the usual extra dividend of 50 cents a share in addition to the quarter common payment of 75 cents.

U. S. Playing Card company reduced its quarterly dividend from $1 to 62½ cents.

Schulze Baking company reduced the convertible preferred stock dividend to 50 cents from 75 cents quarterly. American Rolling Mill company omitted the quarterly 50 cents which has been paid on the common stock. Other companies omitting dividends were Associated Quality Canners, 37½ cents quarterly, and Sarnia Bridge company A stock, 50 cents quarterly.

NEW YORK STATE DROPS SOME RAIL BONDS FROM LIST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 6.—As an aftermath of the disappointing earnings reports of various railroads for 1930 the New York state banking department announced yesterday that certain bonds of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company and subsidiaries; the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville Railway company; the Mobile and Ohio Railroad company, and one issue of the Boston and Albany Railroad company, on account of the showing of the New York Central Railroad company, had been dropped from the list of bonds legal for investment by savings banks in this state. The law requires that the roads must earn one and one-half times their fixed charges.

WARNS BANKERS ON DISTRIBUTION OF SECURITIES

McFadden Fears Inflation from Foreign Loans.

Representative Louis T. McFadden of Pennsylvania, chairman of the house committee on banking and currency, in a speech before the Bankers' club of Chicago last night said a resumption of the large scale distribution of foreign securities in this country would lead to another period of exaggerated industrial activity which in turn would be followed by a depression such as gripped the country late in 1929.

The meeting, which was held at the Palmer house, was attended by 300 Chicago bankers and business men. Representative McFadden told his audience that the ebb and flow of credit that has taken place since the war has not been a matter of ordinary trade and commerce.

Primarily Political.

"It has been primarily political in its nature and has evidenced the desperate efforts of the governments in Europe to regain the economic power they possessed before the war," he declared. "It has been the repercussion of these efforts upon our unregulated federal reserve system that has disturbed our domestic conditions. The stream of credit was not regulated at its source."

Representative McFadden enumerated the amounts that have been sent to Europe. He said that loans of nearly $8,000,000,000 have been made abroad in the last 11 years by American international bankers. This was in addition to the loans of $9,000,000,000 made prior to 1919, which brings the total to $17,000,000,000, he said.

The speaker said he was definitely opposed to the purchase of $3,250,000,000 in German reparation bonds as proposed by the Young plan.

Total of 29 Billions.

The $17,000,000,000 in loans, coupled with the twelve billions that European states owe the United States government, makes a total of 29 billions which is owed to the people of this country by Europeans, Representative McFadden pointed out.

He acknowledged that these loans made it possible for Europe to make purchases in the United States, but he declared that the termination of this group of loans in 1929 also stopped that trade.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 300; hogs, 12,000; sheep, 3,000.

Yesterday's bulge in the hog market carried prices to the highest point in two weeks and 40@55c above the low point of the season. Both the top and general average prices moved up 10c at $7.65 and $7.25, respectively, with the price range the narrowest in recent weeks. The top and average prices lately have been 35@40c apart. Two weeks ago the spread was 75c to $1.00.

Strong eastern support, coupled with continued small receipts, has changed the outlook of the hog market some and many traders hope for additional price enhancement in the near future. More than 40 per cent of yesterday's starvation run of 17,000 hogs sold to eastern buyers. Only 1,000 pen holders remained at the close. According to reports, hogs from nearby territory have been marketed and most of the "old" crop still to come is in stronger hands.

Hog Futures Slow.

Trading in hog futures was extremely slow yesterday. Bids and offers were far apart in most months. April light were offered at $8.50 and bid $8.35. May light were bid $8.25 and September light were offered at $9.25. September medium and heavy were bid $7.75. March mediums carried bids of $7.00, and May mediums were bid $8.00. May heavy were bid $7.75. Few offers were made.

Yesterday's small supply of 2,500 cattle sold slowly at Thursday's losses, but prices are still above the low close of last week. Buyers were bearish and some salesmen carried stock over as unsatisfactory bids in hopes of moderate supplies early next week. No choice grades were here, the best selling steers at $9.25, with few sales over $8.50. Butcher stock continued slow. Calves showed more activity, but are $1.00@1.50 lower than a week ago.

Lambs Hold Firm.

The lamb market held firm yesterday, all interests buying best handyweights at $9.00, while prime 96 lb averages reached $8.85. Buyers held back at the opening, hoping to shave quotations, but met brisk eastern competition in mid-session and later.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 40,000 to 47,000. F. Knutzen marked 47,000, S. Lund, 45,000; R. B. Ellis and H. Wolfe, 40,000; J. M. Wauters, 47,000; E. S. Waterbury, 55,000; F. M. Sherwood and H. Pattison, 52,000; W. T. Reneker, 51,000; A. G. Weidner and W. G. Chandler, 50,000; F. Gehrmann, 45,000, and E. E. Hubbard, 40,000.

SPREAD TACTICS FURNISH PORTION OF WHEAT TRADE

Canada Proposes to Trade Grain for Coffee.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Spreading operations furnished part of the trade in wheat yesterday, with commission houses and locals selling old May and buying July, and there was also buying of July here against sales at Winnipeg and the reverse. While September was sold against purchases of September corn.

Houses with southwestern connections were persistent sellers of the September in small lots and at one time it went to around ¼c under the July, compared with even at the close on Thursday.

New crop wheat future on the Chicago Board of Trade held within a range of 1⅛c, advancing early on strength in Liverpool, only to react later on scattered selling and close ⅜@½c lower, with July 63⅝c and September 63⅛c. Old crop months lost ⅛c for the day, with March finishing at 79¼c and May 81⅝c.

Winnipeg Weakens at Finish.

Messages from Winnipeg indicated that speculative interest in the wheat market there was unusually light, and while there was buying by seaboard interests early, the market weakened toward the last on local pressure and closed unchanged from Thursday, with the July at 60⅝c. There were around 600,000 bu Manitobas sold for export during the day, but nothing was heard regarding business in domestic hard winters, and seaboard reports indicated that the farm board had made no direct offers abroad. It is understood that part of the hard winter wheat to be moved out from Chicago by the stabilization corporation will go to Indiana and Ohio points for storage purposes, which are not counted in the domestic visible supply.

A proposal that around 25,000,000 bu Canadian wheat be sold to Brazil, payment for the grain to be made in coffee, failed to have any effect of consequence on the Winnipeg market. Details of the proposal were not made public.

Heavy snow was reported over parts of the winter wheat belt, especially in Nebraska, and late in the day snow was falling at numerous points in Kansas. The additional moisture was regarded as a bearish influence and likely to have the effect of depressing the new crop months. Liverpool closed unchanged to ⅛d higher, with the July closing at 64⅝c. Buenos Aires was weak and 1¼@1⅝c lower.

Corn Futures Easier.

Corn showed fair strength early on a continuation of commission house buying and closing of spreads with wheat, and later an overbought pit condition was disclosed with the finish on the deferred futures ⅛@⅜c lower, while March was ¼c higher. The latter closed at 62¼c, May at 64⅛@64⅝c, July at 66⅞@67c, and September at 68⅝@68¾c. There was an absence of the free buying of July, so much in evidence on Thursday.

Cash interests absorbed the car lots in the sample market and were credited with having sold futures as a hedge. The basis on corn was steady to ⅛c higher as compared with May, while at Omaha it was ¼c higher. Kansas City, however, reported the basis as steady to ¼c lower at the last, with some cars carried over unsold. No improvement was shown in the shipping demand. Buenos Aires closed unchanged to ⅛c lower.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS.

Wheat traders remain bearish, but the volume of business is so small that there is not enough trade on most days to advance prices through the "offers" or depress them through the "bids," except occasionally. Action of the farm board has no particular influence on the wheat traders. Old May wheat was offered freely and spreading operations between May and September are attracting attention, as are also spreading between Chicago and Winnipeg. Sentiment in corn is more divided and the market runs into support on breaks, but the volume of business is not large and cash interests who buy carloads in the sample market are hedging their purchases by sales of May in the pit.

Fair export sales of wheat were made by farm board agencies yesterday, but quantities and prices were not given, although pit traders had it that cash wheat was selling at slightly under the March price, which was 79c. It is said that 400,000 bu of wheat is being moved out of Chicago mostly to Ohio river mills and good shipments are to be made within a few days from Omaha to eastern and southeastern mills. Within the last 4 days 490,000 bu of wheat have been sold by Chicago elevator interests to go to store, which would absorb the bulk of the elevator space created by the movement of wheat by the Grain Stabilization corporation.

EGG FUTURES FIRMER

Butter futures closed unsettled on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, having an early advance. Storage news in butter was slightly bearish in tone, weakening the market at the last, March failing to hold or sell under the previous close. Eggs were steady. Potatoes closed firm. Sales: Butter, 25 cars; eggs, 40 cars; potatoes, 16 cars. Deliveries: Eggs, 5 cars. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Foreign demand for Manitoba wheat showed some improvement, with Winnipeg messages indicating that 600,000 bu or more had been sold, and further bids were said to be in the market. The farm board did not offer hard winter abroad over night, according to seaboard reports, but offered direct to exporters No. 1 hard was held at 11¾c under May at the gulf and No. 2 hard at 12¾c under for first half March shipment, while last half was ½c more.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Friday: Wheat, 63 cars; corn, 174 cars; oats, 14 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 7 cars.

GRAIN ON FARMS

Farmers' holdings of wheat and oats on March 1 were the largest in recent years and of corn the smallest in recent years, as compiled by returns from grain dealers throughout the leading agricultural states by H. E. Miller of James E. Bennett & Co. Estimates on the three leading grains are smaller than those of the four leading statisticians, who reported early in the week. Comparisons, with the three ciphers omitted, follow:

	Wheat.	Corn.	Oats.
Gov., 1930	129,734	988,550	398,310
Gov., 1929	151,396	1,021,973	497,335

10 yr. average	143,988	1,141,826	477,639

Iowa and Illinois have the largest reserves of corn and Iowa the heaviest stock of oats. North Dakota farmers have more wheat than any other state. Details of wheat and corn for the last 2 years, with the three ciphers omitted, follow:

	—CORN— 1931.	1930.	—WHEAT— 1931.	1930.

ADVISE COTTON CO-OPS TO REDUCE ACREAGE

A warning that the only way to get better prices for the next crop of cotton is for farmers to reduce their acreage sufficiently to bring the supply into balance with prospective demands has been sent out by C. O. Moser, chairman of the acreage reduction committee of the American Cotton Cooperative association in a circular addressed to banks and all other interests. He predicts a carry-over of 8,700,000 bales next August.

The cotton markets were weaker the greater part of yesterday and closed around the bottom, with losses on futures in Chicago of 15@18 points and 20@21 points in New York. Liverpool was 8@20 points net lower with sales of 6,000 bales. Spots in New York dropped 20 points to 11.05c, with New Orleans off 15 points to 10.75c and Galveston and Houston 10.95c. Prices follow:

PACKERS TAKE LARD

Packing interests were said to be the best buyers of lard yesterday and there was also fair commission house trading on both sides, furnishing the principal selling. Offerings were well taken and prices on futures closed 10 to 12½c higher. In all it was a fairly satisfactory market. Liverpool lard was unchanged to 3d lower, the latter on futures. Export clearances of lard were 2,634,775 lbs. Little interest was taken in bellies as the prices were nominally 20c higher on futures. Prices follow:

STUDEBAKER'S SPECIAL SAVINGS

Every car has been slashed to the bone for this sale. You can buy with confidence. 5 days' free driving trial goes with each sale.

STUDEBAKER PRESIDENT, 1927, Big Six, 7 pass. Sedan. Attractive oriental finish and expensive upholstery, 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, heater, spare tire, etc. $895.

CADILLAC TOURING. This is absolutely the best open car buy in Chicago. It runs fine and has heater, spare tire, bumpers, etc. $95.

STEARNS KNIGHT SEDAN. Cannot be duplicated any place else at anywhere near our price. It's a 7 pass. with 4 whl. brakes, spare tire, bumpers, heater, etc. Has nice mohair upholstery. $145.

ELCAR 8 SEDAN. This is a roomy 7 pass. with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, driving light, heater, practically new brand spare tire, and other extras. This is a luxurious car at a remarkable bargain at our price of $145.

WILLYS KNIGHT SEDAN. This car is a real beauty and performs very efficiently. Tires have little mileage and the equipment includes 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $245.

BUICK SEDAN. Mast. 6 that's an ideal car for the family. The finish has not a mar on it and the upholstery appears unused. Motor is smooth and powerful. Many valuable extras. A sensational buy at $275.

PIERCE-ARROW PHAETON, 7 pass. model 80 that looks and runs better than many cars priced at $750 and up. The finish is a two-tone combination of gray and tan. The expensive upholstery is like new. Motor is unusually efficient. 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, glass sides, bumpers, etc. $285.

CHEVROLET CONV. COUPE. 1929 Six finished a robin's egg blue. This is a snappy looking, good performing car, with excellent tires and a wealth of extras. Priced at $295 for quick sale, but worth twice this figure.

PONTIAC COACH. 1928, that never felt the Chicago blues. Every detail of the exterior and interior will satisfy the most exacting buyer. Motor is very quiet, with 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, shutter front, trunk rack, heater, shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, step-plates, etc. A real pickup at $295.

PACKARD SEDAN. Here is an expensive car that was chauffeur driven and now it's the last word for beautiful appearance and sparkling performance. This car will give you economical transportation and the prestige that comes with a fine car. Has 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. Special for $350.

STUDEBAKER LIMOUSINE. [This is car illustrated in today's Tribune full page used car ad]. 1929 President 7 pass. Sedan-Limo that's equipped with wire wheels, side mounts, heater, shutter front, trunk rack, heater, shock absorbers, bumpers, etc. This car has luxurious fittings and distinguished appearance. Motor is A1. Originally sold for over $2,500. Now $885.

LIBERAL TERMS. OPEN EVES.. SUN.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

[Sketch by Tribune artist.]

SOBS ON STAND AS HE TELLS OF HOW GIRL MET HER FATE. Artist's sketch of Virgil Kirkland as he appeared when he broke down and wept as he told of the events of the night on which Arlene Draves received injuries that caused her death. (Story on page 1.)

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

PURDUE UNIVERSITY CO-EDS MAKE TOUR OF INSPECTION OF STORES. Muriel Schwarer, modeling a Patou pink evening gown in loop store's custom apparel shop as fifty students from Lafayette school look on.

SAVES MOTHER. Violet Albert, 11, explains possession of dog to court's satisfaction, and theft case is dropped. (Story on page 4.)

QUITS FARM BOARD. Alexander Legge of Chicago resigns as chairman and member. (Story on page 8.)

[Sketches by Tribune artist.]

EMOTIONS SHOW THEIR PLAY AS VIRGIL KIRKLAND TELLS HIS STORY. Six characteristic expressions of the defendant in gin orgy murder trial as he took the stand and fought to save his life by a narrative which pictured his relations with Arlene Draves as a romance which he had intended was to culminate in their marriage. At times he broke down and wept, the first occasion being when he told of their first kiss. He finished his testimony yesterday, and the state was putting on rebuttal when court adjourned. (Story on page 1.)

BOY, 5 YEARS OLD, FOUND DEAD IN CHICKEN COOP. William Rock of 2027 West 120th street, who probably was killed when he fell from roost five feet high. (Story on page 3.)

"LITTLE FATHER" STRAYS TOO FAR WITH BABY. Donnie Dravant, 5 years old, gives his little sister Lily, 2 years old, coffee as they await parents at Des Plaines street police station. (Story on page 4.)
